Vote Wednesday on School and Site.

On Wednesday next the ratepayers of Prince Rupert will have an opportunity to vote once more on the proposal to raise $150,000 for a new permanent school building for this city. They passed the by-law once but there was a flaw in it and it has to be passed again to become effective.

Everyone, we think, will admit the necessity of erecting a new school and will vote for the bylaw on Wednesday. We cannot, as a city, afford to have it go out to the world that we refuse to provide accommodation for the education of the children.

In addition to voting on the bylaw, the ratepayers will be asked to vote on a choice of sites. The building will be erected either at Acropolis Hill or at Hays Cove Circle. It is for the voters to say where it shall go.

If the school is built at Acropolis Hill there is a playground available at once that cost $35,000. At Hays Cove Circle there is no playground and if the school is built there, the children will have no suitable place to play for years to come. It will be quite impossible to grade the school grounds at present, unless a new bylaw is passed providing for the raising of a suitable sum of money for the work.

A school will undoubtedly be erected at Hays Cove, but it should be a high school. The King Edward School already provides for the people of that neighborhood. It is for the people to decide, however. What we would ask is that ratepayers get away from the narrow individual advantage viewpoint and look at it from the point of view of the general advantage of the largest number of children.

We believe it is wicked to deprive children of the opportunities for play. We believe that the person who is a party to doing that is worse than a criminal. It is not half as bad to steal as to refuse for some selfish reason the right of the children to moral development, which can only be secured through a proper physical as well as mental training.

These things all have to be taken into consideration in deciding this important matter. It is up to the people who have the interests of the children at heart to point out the advantages and disadvantages as they see them.

Do We Suffer From Depreciated Currency?

We often hear people speak in a pitiful way of a country with depreciated currency. There are disabilities doubtless attendant on discounted money, but there are also compensations. The country where money is below par can manufacture more cheaply than where it is at a premium. Take Germany for instance. Her money is worth very little. The rate of exchange is very much against her. The result is that goods manufactured in that country can be sold at prices that will undercut any other country.

Practically all the countries that were at war, with the exception of the United States, Japan and China, have depreciated currency. Russia is the extreme case, but her money has practically no value so that she is unable to do business with other countries except by way of barter. Germany comes next and there follow France and Great Britain and Canada. There is about four per cent against this country as compared with the United States.

If we purchase in the United States market we have to pay four per cent on exchange, besides duties. That really increases the duty four per cent. As a result the tendency is to purchase in Canada. If we sell to the United States we get four per cent more for the goods than we should from selling at home.

The way to overcome the disparity is to produce more. By doing that we can overcome the rate of exchange and shall again be able to do business on an equality with the United States.

Much to Sell But Little Market.

The United States has lots of goods to sell but the demand is not great because of the exchange difficulties. European nations buy from Germany rather than in the States because they can get the goods so much cheaper. As a result goods are piling up in the American factories and very soon the prices must slump, unless the exchange rate is equalized. There is a year's supply of wool on hand, but there is no demand for American clothes outside of that country.

Produce More and Spend Less.

An article in the Wall Street Journal comments on the depreciated currency of Europe and the hopelessness of trying to bring it to a par with that of the United States where gold still can be exchanged for notes. It states that if we continue to increase the cost of production matters will only get worse. The salvation of the situation is to produce more and spend less.

They Went to Vancouver

We were told last week of a person who bought an article while in Vancouver and noticed the same thing later in our window for 50c less.

There's no need to send away in most cases. We buy from the same factories as larger stores do, and we keep their catalogues to compare by.

This year we have the finest and best selected stock ever in Prince Rupert. You should buy at home if we can suit you for we spend our money in town and far away stores do not.

We are here at home to make any adjustments needed and if we get your trade we are encouraged to keep a larger variety for the occasion when you need something special.
