DRAMATIC IN THEME

"Doctors' Wives" Has Entirely Novel Background—Baxter and Bennett

An unusual dramatic theme played against a background seldom if ever before featured on the screen makes "Doctors' Wives," current attraction at the Capitol Theatre, a picture of exceptional interest. While many past novels, stage plays and screen dramas have featured the heroic services of doctors, this one depicts realistically the hopes, ambitions, conflicts and inner doubts of their wives to attention.

The story revolves about a tempestuous romance and marriage, which goes on the rocks when the young doctor's wife falls prey to the suspicions sown in her mind by her mother who insists that women patients seek out her husband for other than medical attention. She is finally made to understand that her suspicions are unfounded in fact and that a doctor's duty to humanity is greater than his own personal life.

Leading roles are handled with distinction by Warner Baxter as the successful and ambitious young surgeon and by Joan Bennett as his demure and emotional wife. Victor Varconi, who has not been seen since he played here as Lord Nelson in "The Divine Lady," has an important part.

Admirers of Miss Bennett regret that she will be off the screen for many months if not permanently because of a recent horseback accident when she broke her hip and sustained serious back injuries.

CHECKING GLACIERS

Governor Parks of Alaska Guest Recently on Canadian Public Works Boat

JUNEAU, Aug. 26.—Will the retreat of Grand Pacific Glacier eventually give the Dominion a Canadian port in the heart of the Alaska panhandle? This has been the principle topic of conversation among glaciologists who visited the territory this summer and the point has not been relegated into the discard yet. Rumors that Canadians contemplate the establishment of a tourist resort at the head of Grand Pacific Inlet have been rife of late.

The question was put to J. P. Forde, divisional engineer for the department of public works of Canada, who arrived in Juneau recently aboard the Canadian yacht Walronda, Capt. H. Aldren, from Victoria, B.C.

"We have had our eyes on Grand Pacific for some time—since 1925, at least," Mr. Forde said, "but just what use we can make of the three-quarters of a mile of land which retreating glacier has left for us is yet to be determined."

Glacier Quits Alaska

During the summer of 1925, a party of surveyors found that Grand Pacific Glacier, which has been trying for a good many years to decide whether it wanted to be an Alaskan or a Canadian glacier, had finally made up its mind to change its nationality. It has now withdrawn almost a mile from the International Boundary Line, giving Canada a port of entry into Northern British Columbia.

"The Canadian government has withdrawn this strip of land from the public domain," Mr. Forde said. "We don't know what use we can make of it, as the country beyond it is practically unexplored. It is doubtful, however, if we can ever use it as a means of ingress to the Whitehorse country—there are too many ice fields and high mountain ranges."

Governor Parks a Guest

W. A. Gourlay, senior engineer for the department of public works of Canada, Mrs. Gourlay and John Yarrow, of Yarrow, Ltd., shipbuilders of Victoria, are Mr. Forde's guests on the cruise. Mr. Yarrow is the grandson of Alfred Yarrow, the

WHEN THE BUSINESS GIRL COOKS

I had such an interesting letter this morning from a typical business girl—Jeanette T—. She lives in Montreal, spends her daytime hours in a big investment company, and holds a position of responsibility. But, when the clock hands point to closing time, she becomes another person—a typical home maker, even if her home is only a tiny apartment.

When she cooks, she wants not only delicious results, but she wants to get them easily, surely and economically. Moreover, she has an open mind to new ideas, and keen judgment in valuing them—in cookery as much as in business.

She tells me that she uses Carnation Milk in all her cookery. Her straightforward comment is: "I like the way the food tastes with Carnation Milk."

Very generously, she passes along her discoveries to her friends, and asks me to send my "lovely cook book" to others in the office, and to keep her supplied with my latest recipes.

Isn't that a characteristic letter? I know that what she has found out about Carnation Milk other women will find—that it gives better results in cookery than even the best of bottled milk, that it is the most convenient and economical form of milk, that it is absolutely dependable as to richness and purity, and that its double creaminess and finely broken up cream particles give a fineness of texture and richness of flavor to every food in which Carnation Milk is used. Carnation Milk, remember, is simply the best of milk, protected at the source. It comes from clean herds, housed in clean barns, milked by clean hands into clean cans. This safeguarded milk is evaporated to double richness and sterilized for safekeeping.

I want you to try one of the recipes which my Montreal friend especially likes. And I want you to send for a whole book of recipes as well. Just write for the free Carnation Cook Book to Carnation Co., Limited, 134 Abbott St., Vancouver, B.C.

Carnation Macaroni De Luxe—½ lb. macaroni, 3 tbsp. butter, 1 green pepper, chopped, 1 cup mushrooms (canned), 3 tbsp. flour, 1 tsp. salt, pepper, 1 can chicken soup, ½ can mushroom liquor, 1 cup Carnation Milk, ½ pint, chopped, paprika. Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until it is tender. Drain and rinse with cold water. Sauté the green pepper and mushrooms in the butter until tender (about 10 minutes) keeping them covered while cooking. Remove the mushrooms and peppers and blend the flour and seasonings with the fat; then add the soup, mushroom liquor and Carnation. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Combine with the macaroni, green pepper, mushrooms and paprika; heat thoroughly and serve in a casserole.

USE THE SAFEGUARDED MILK

Because the cream is broken up minutely, Carnation Milk gives to any dish a smooth, velvety texture which even the best of bottled milk cannot equal. Through the services of Carnation "field men," dairymen are encouraged to build up their herds and taught strict standards of cleanliness thus safeguarding Carnation Milk at the source. And this protection continues until Carnation Milk reaches you in its hermetically sealed containers. (See recipe above.)
