DEMAND ON SCHMELING

Showdown In Matter of World's Heavyweight Crown Is Impending

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The final showdown, it is expected, will come today in the matter of bringing the world's heavyweight boxing crown into competition again. Max Schmeling, the titleholder, is expected to announce whether or not he intends to box Jack Sharkey in New York in the summer. Insistence is growing that Schmeling should do this fight or else relinquish the crown. So far, Schmeling's manager has held out that Sharkey is not good enough for the German.

If Schmeling does not accept the bid to meet Sharkey, it is likely that he will take on in Chicago the winner of the forthcoming Primo Carnera-Young Stribling affair.

Breakwater Is Impracticable

Federal Public Works Engineer Replies to Suggestion of City Council

A letter from J. P. Forde, district engineer for the federal department of public works, read at last night's meeting of the city council, stated that, owing to the great depth of the water of the harbor here, the proposal of establishing a floating breakwater in connection with the new fishermen's floats here would be impracticable. Owing to the great fluctuation of tides here, any booms or logs fastened by slack chains would drift about so as to endanger both vessels moored at the floats and boats passing in the fairway. Other places had found such a system of little if any service. In view of this, Mr. Forde was not prepared to recommend such a system here. The letter was filed without comment.
