HALIBUT INQUIRY

set the fish that were being taken out.

G. W. Nickerson did not believe that the smaller American and Canadian boats would have an equal break with the large American boats if there were division into areas. The larger boats would be able to fish in the open areas which could be used by the smaller boats and would have the advantage of being able to proceed to the farther off banks where the small boats could not go after the closer-in areas had been fished out. Under such a system, the Canadian boats might be "broke" in a single season. Mr. Nickerson asked why the ratio of the catch of the last few seasons could not be ascertained and the American and Canadian boats be limited to their proper proportions.

Mr. Found disagreed with some of Mr. Nickerson's suggestions along this line. Capt. Charles Edwards suggested that fishing gear might be standardized. Small hooks could be done away with and that would help to preserve the small fish.

Both the Deep Sea Fishermen's Union and the Canadian Halibut Vessel Owners' Association expressed themselves as being favorable to the closing of the Masset and Timbered Island so-called "chicken" areas to fishing. The boat owners, however, felt that the area thereabouts to be closed need not necessarily be so extensive as set out. Capt. Dan Larsen presented the views of the boat owners.

Both boat owners and fishermen joined in the suggestion that something should be done along the line of providing penalties for the landing and buying of halibut under five pounds in weight. This, it was felt, would do much toward the discouraging of the taking of immature fish. Capt. Leon Sandvar made the statement that about 60% of such fish after being caught would revive and live if thrown back into the sea. It was pointed out that the commission had no authority to set or impose such penalties.

Matter of Duty

Capt. Leon Sandvar inquired from the commission as to what was being done toward bringing about a removal of the 2c duty on Canadian fish entering the United States. Mr. Found pointed out that it was entirely a matter for the government. However, both the department and the government were fully alive to the situation and were seeking to bring about some satisfactory and definite solution. He was hopeful that steps with that end in view would soon be taken. Mr. Babcock stated that President Herbert Hoover of the United States had told him personally that it was his (Mr. Hoover's) desire that the fisheries of United States and Canada should be on an equal footing.

Before the close of the meeting, T. H. Johnson moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Babcock, Mr. Found and Dr. Thompson for the time, efforts and labor they had expended in the valuable work they were doing in connection with the International Fisheries Commission. It was only men of such proven ability as these who could tackle the important problems presented. The vote of thanks was seconded by Capt. J. D. Thurber and carried enthusiastically.

In closing the meeting, Mr. Babcock invited all present when, in Seattle, to visit commission headquarters there and inspect the work that was being done. The case of the Pacific halibut fishery he likened to that of a sick patient on whom the performing of an operation was necessary. The operation might involve some pain but it would be of ultimate benefit and was necessary to preserve life. He hoped that the halibut fishing interests would take the "doctor's advice" and permit of the necessary operation being performed and a permanent remedy, as was hoped for, effected. Mr. Babcock, in conclusion, expressed appreciation for the vote of thanks which had been passed.

Expects Orders For Poles During Coming Year

"We are at present trying to move off the poles that we have already purchased and they are going rather slowly but after the new year we are expecting things to change and we look forward to doing a good deal of business in this part of the country next year," declared L. P. Chapman, pole dealer of Spokane, who was in the city visiting with Olof Hanson M.P. yesterday. Mr. Chapman said he looked for an improvement in the business very soon. He said he had bought a great many poles from the Hanson Company. Early in the year the big companies are in the habit of looking their orders and then it is expected they will be looking to the Skeena and Bulkley Valleys to supply part of their needs.

"We have had a quiet time in our business," Mr. Chapman stated, "but things cannot always remain that way. The turn for the better has commenced and we all expect improvement very soon."
