WHEAT BEGINS TO MOVE

The first week of November, 1931, is likely to be remembered as that which saw the end of the depression that had begun two years earlier—always granting, of course, that the revival of activity observed in so many quarters during the last few days continues and increases, says a Vancouver Star editorial.

As a matter of fact, the first indications of a change for the better were noted by close observers several weeks ago. But there was no great disposition to trust them, for there had already been several false dawns. Even now many people, although hopeful, are hesitating to commit themselves without reserve to the view that the upturn has really come.

It may be pointed out, however, that previous expectations were either based on less tangible developments than those now manifesting themselves, or on factors, such as the international moratorium, that failed to produce results confidently looked for. Today there is something substantial on which to found a belief that, if the world in general, and Canada in particular, are not yet out of the woods, glimpses of the clearing are beginning to appear between the trees.

SILVER AND WHEAT

If the reasons for the sudden advance in the price of silver were as obviously justified as those that have raised wheat prices to levels that a few weeks ago seemed merely visionary, one could be fairly confident that a general and large improvement in world industry and commerce was imminent.

Last February silver had fallen to the lowest mark ever recorded, 23 3/4 cents an ounce. A day or two ago it stood at 36, an increase in value so great as to augment the purchasing power of silver-currency countries, with a population of about one billion, nearly 50 per cent.

It is not easy to account for this. It may be occasioned by a speculative movement anticipatory of serious hostilities in the Orient. War between China and Japan would cause a big demand for silver as for other commodities. It would, however, be the least satisfactory way of bringing about a renewal of industrial and commercial activity.

MOST IMPORTANT FACTORS

Apart from wheat, possibly the largest factors in the revival of confidence so apparent abroad are the departure of Great Britain from the gold standard and the political stabilization effected by the results of the general election there.

John Bull is determinedly setting his house in order, since this was a necessary preliminary to any general change for the better, hope is born anew.

In short, the signs, on the whole, are that the world is really turning the corner. There will, of course, be recessions from time to time, but the curve, reckoning from the first week of November, is likely to be of a generally upward trend.

A SATURDAY SERMON

Importance of Small Things

By R. M. Steele, Captain, Salvation Army

Many people today discount the value of small things in their lives. But many of the smallest things in the world are of the greatest importance. England is one of the smallest countries in the world, but has founded the greatest empire ever known. Palestine is in itself of no importance, yet out of it came our Redeemer, and a religion that has imposed itself upon most of the world. Many of the greatest men of the world were brought up in obscure villages and in poverty. Abraham Lincoln, known and loved around the world, was born in a log cabin. He went to school but a few months, read and studied by the flickering light of the fireplace. Few men knew the pangs of poverty more than he. Booker T. Washington, who did so much for the Negro race was born in slavery. As a boy he slept on a pile of straw in the slave quarters. He worked and struggled and sacrificed to secure an education and then gave his life unselfishly to his own race. Sir John McDonald, Canada's greatest statesman, was born in a poor home. His father was a plain everyday Scotch storekeeper. Gypsy Smith, one of the world's greatest evangelists was born in a Gypsy tent and did not sleep in a bed until he was a young man entered upon his life's work.

Thomas Edison, who recently passed to the Great Beyond, as a boy sold newspapers on the train which ran between Detroit and Port Huron, Mich. It was thus he secured money to carry on his first experiments. Probably the best example that history records is that of our pattern, Jesus. He was born in a manger and during His busy career had no where to lay His head. While He was the poorest of men, His life was the greatest life even though brief which this world has known. Our Lord compared the Kingdom of Heaven in its inception to a grain of mustard seed, the smallest of all seeds but destined to fill the world.

One sin unrepented of and unforgiven will damn a soul.

Origin of Evil
A young man consulted John Newton concerning the origin of evil. He replied I am more anxious to get sin out of the world than to know how it came into the world. This saying is not so wise as it seems. For to know where sin takes its rise is a first consequence in its attempt to extinguish it. In the Soul Christ declared that it took its origin and in the Soul Christ sought to deal with it. Supplying a spiritual antidote for a spiritual plague.

Life is made up of the little acts of duty. It is not so much what we have but the way we use it that tells. We are not responsible for what we start with but using what we have to the best advantage and increasing it. We may have ordinary gifts and few talents. Our opportunities may be on a small scale but if consecrated to God and used for Him Great things may be accomplished. In the pleasant path of duty having on the whole armour of our God may we do today's duties, fight today's temptations, "not looking for things we cannot see, nor could not understand if we saw them," but in His strength and in His Name—who forgiveth all our iniquities—who healeth all our diseases—we find just what we should do for Him today.

Capt. J. B. Colthrust, who has been spending a few weeks on his ranch here, returned to his residence at Sooke, Vancouver Island, on Sunday's train.

One of the bridges on the Terrace-Usk highway near Gold Creek needed the attention of a road crew last week, the week-end floods having carried away a dangerous part of the road and undermined the bridge.

Fred Nash returned last Thursday from his survey work on the transprovincial road route east of Usk.

About half a dozen members of the local Orange Lodge journeyed to Prince Rupert last week to take part in ceremonies of the Superior Lodge.

Mrs. Marsh and her sister, Miss Mason, journeyed to Prince Rupert last week in search of medical advice.

Robert Corlett went down to the coast on Thursday's train, returning on Saturday.

Splendid leeks from the local ranch of Hamlin and Thomson have been put on sale at the local stores.

The Anglican Church vestry has decided to ascertain the cost of tiling up the parish hall so as to be ready for use when required.

Mrs. E. M. Smith is at present at the home of Mrs. S. Wilkinson, here, where she is receiving medical treatment.

A letter from Mrs. Robinson, wife of a former vicar, has been received in which she states that her son, Theodore, who is now 13 years old, is now in High School at Princeton.

The closing down of relief camps has brought an unusual quietness to the town and business is at a low ebb. So far nothing is known as to when work may be resumed.

Nothing new regarding relief work has occurred here during the week. Most of the married workers are now at their homes, single men without local residences being cared for at the camps.

Work at Little's sawmill was toned down during the latter part of last week. A number of employees were in Prince Rupert.
