It is impossible to avoid Irritability and Worry when the Nervous System is Run Down RRITABILITY like worry wastes the nerve force at a tremendous rate. Fits of anger and excitement put an unbearable strain on the heart and nerves especially when these organs are already in a weakened condition. Disorders of the nerves do not right themselves but tend to become worse because of the exhausting effect of sleeplessness, loss of appetite and indigestion.

New nerve force must be restored to the system by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. By this means the building up process is established and health and vigor are gradually and certainly brought back.
