

Embarrassed By Pimples on Face

Mrs. O. J. Benson, Seal Cove, N.B., writes: "I was in a very nervous, rundown condition, and not able to do my own work. My face was covered with pimples which was very annoying and embarrassing to me at times. After taking three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I can do my own work, and the pimples have entirely disappeared."

DEPRESSION AND RECOVERY

The law which governs periodical depressions and recoveries is a peculiar one but it is as relentless as death. So far there has been found no way of escape from it.

Illustrate it this way. Everything is going well. Everybody is employed. Hammers and saws are heard as the new buildings go up. There is universal optimism. Then a point is reached where no more buildings are needed and those already erected are not used to capacity. Carpenters are idle. Immediately this reflects itself on the rest of the community. Other tradesmen are idle, hardware stores and builders' supplies do less business; real estate offices close and thus more buildings are empty and the slump is accentuated. Gradually this condition spreads until workmen of all classes are included and there is an unemployment problem; merchants are suffering, business is slack all round and times are said to be bad.

Then there is a brighter side. When a point is reached where production has dropped off and scarcity of a number of articles causes a brisk demand, prices improve, factories become busy, gradually more men are employed, offices and buildings are in demand, motor cars are purchased, people are demanding more of the luxuries of life and the revival is carried along by its own impetus until it once more reaches the peak.

History repeats itself but with changing conditions there are changing effects from similar causes. Sometimes a slump is more severe than the preceding one and lasts longer. Sometimes good times are better than they were at the previous peak period.

CAN WE STABILIZE?

The Socialists tell us that the only method of stabilizing production and consumption is to produce for use and not for profit, but Russia is making an artificial effort to produce more than she consumes by means of her Five Year Plan and we have no experience to show what the result will be. Will it be followed by a slump as in capitalistic countries or will it bring about an even worse condition? Every effort to control the law of supply and demand is an experiment, and some such experiments have been going on since the beginning of history.

Now, with all the mechanical appliances at the service of man and with all the developed ingenuity, it does not speak well for the race if some means cannot be devised for so stabilizing industry that the periods of deep slump and peak production may be avoided.
