For the past month basketball enthusiasts have been treated to some very closely contested and thrilling games but the senior game, which brought C.N.R. and Panthers together last night, climaxed an evening and a month of interesting play. At first it just looked like "another" basketball game with the C. N. R. probable winners. Their deadly combination started to grind from the start. However, they found that the Panthers had added another claw to their attack in the form of Alex Mitchell who paired up with Allan Cross to form an almost perfect defence. These two men worried opposing forwards all the time and they were on every rebound and intercepted numerous passes. Even then, Styles helped himself to 17 points, and rebounds are his "meat." Ten minutes from the start the Trainmen had tallied 12 points, but the Panthers came to life and scored two points, only to weaken before another C. N. onslaught which netted them seven
