Working for Profit Or For Production.

The main difference between the address of T. A. Barnard and that of an advanced Liberal was that while the Liberal is usually content with proposing reforms suited to the immediate future, Mr. Barnard held over the heads of his audience an "ultimate," a goal toward which the Federated Labor Party is working, which is the eventual absorption of all industries by the state and their operation for the purpose of filling the needs of the community and not for profit for its members.

Naturally those who have not this aim before them will argue that such an ultimate is impossible in that here in British Columbia we catch fish to feed the people of New York and we manufacture lumber to house the people of Eastern Canada or to make aeroplanes for the people of Great Britain. What impetus would there be to do this work if profit were eliminated?

Profit is the only thing that keeps the manufacturer or the merchant in the game. If we were quite self contained it might be easy to adjust matters, but when to fill our needs it is necessary to trade with China and Japan, to buy sugar from Hawaii and Jamaica; to import coffee from Java and Mexico; to bring in goods from the far ends of the earth and to sell enough of our own produce to pay for these, how is it to be done? We cannot exchange, for these people do not want our goods. The people who handle the exchange and who have the goods manufactured are those who take profits. Sometimes the profits are too high, but the work is necessary and it must be paid for.

Gambling is Part Of All Business.

When risks are great profits are high. In betting on a horse race the profits on a favorite are low. There is a good chance of winning. On the dark horse the profits are high because the risks are great. In any business where the returns are fairly sure, profits are usually small. If they were not, more people would engage in the business. Where there are great risks, profits are high, or are expected to be high.

There are risks in all lines of business. It is a certain amount of gamble. A man puts capital in, which he might spend on his own personal pleasures. He risks that amount and often he loses. To make up for this risk he takes profits which are considerably higher than wages, else why take the risk and have the worry? This is the point of view of the merchant or manufacturer.

Nothing But Best Satisfies Prince Rupert.

While the active members of the Prince Rupert Choral Society sang very well on Monday night, so well that their excellent work was the subject of much comment, there was a lack of enthusiasm on their part, caused doubtless by the class of composition which they were called upon to interpret. St. Cecilia's Day is a pretty little cantata, but not the sort of thing which inspires either a choir or an audience. That it did neither on Monday was self evident. Singing it was cold blooded work.

When there are so many fine choruses by real masters it seems a pity not to choose the best. Prince Rupert audiences are very appreciative of the best in music. They appreciated the playing of Will Edmunds on his cello. They appreciated the first song of Dr. Large, the piano selections of Mrs. Large and the Italian interpretation of Mrs. Herbert Woods. These were all classical selections. They were expositions of real art. Why then did the audience not show appreciation of the choral and recitative selections in the first part of the program? Because they were not classics. They were not the best. There was not the touch of the great masters in their composition.

It is not for an outsider to interfere and it is with diffidence we suggest in a matter of this kind. If the Choral Society expects to get the support of the people, however, it must give the people the kind of music it is willing to pay for, and as we have said before, it is willing to pay for the best.

Choruses from the big oratorios or from the operas would give the singers something to work for. It would increase the interest in the choir and ensure a good attendance and an appreciation of the work.

The News recognizes the excellent work done by the Prince Rupert Choral Society and it is only because of an earnest desire to see the good work continue that the criticism is made. We believe there may be a great future for them. Let the selection committee make a more suitable choice and there should be a great improvement.

Anticipation!

"Here comes the mailman with my parcels!" It surely is a pleasure to the dweller in the country to anticipate the arrival of the mailman and the opening up of much desired things that have been ordered from the city.

What about your Christmas parcels from Birks? Are they ordered? We try to please everyone, but naturally "first come, first served."

The demand this year is far above normal—don't delay longer!

HAZELTON

Not a bit discouraged by being burned out last week both Chinese restaurants have reopened in other locations. The loss is finally put at $10,000 as a result of the fire although the Chinese claim to have lost a lot of personal effects which would probably swell the total.

Shortly after New Year the Delta Copper Co. is to resume operations on the property on Roehrer de Boule mountain. The operations will be in charge of W. G. Norrie Lowenthal, superintendent of the Silver Standard.

Two Telkwa births took place at the Hazelton hospital last week when daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Heal.

Miss Cunningham and Miss Wattie have returned from a few weeks' visit in Port Essington and Victoria.

Miss Margaret McCormack, who has been a patient in the Hazelton Hospital for many months, returned to her home in Vanderhoof last Monday, accompanied by her mother.

The Hazelton branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will hold a grand masquerade dance on New Year's Eve. Harvey's Orchestra of Prince Rupert has been engaged to supply the music.
