SPORTSMAN

Louis Rubenstein Was Exemplification of Simon Pure Amateur

Of Louis Rubenstein, one time figure skating champion of the world, prominent cyclist, bowler, curler, and all-round lover of sport, whose death occurred Saturday in Montreal, a noted sporting writer once said: "He was the definition of the word 'amateur' in sport. He never accepted financial reward. He paid his own expenses even while representing Canada at figure skating and other championship meetings in Canada, the United States and Europe. He never capitalized his championship victories. He donated fees allotted to him as a nember of the Montreal Boxing Commission to amateur sporting

He had hardly arrived in the country when he was clapped into jail, suspected of Nihilism and all the other things which carried life imprisonment or transportation to Siberia in the days of the Czar. However, Mr. Rubenstein had very good friends at Ottawa. Indeed, the Princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria, wife of the Marquis Lorne, then governor general Canada, was one of his skating pupils. So he got out of jail just in time to compete in the figure-skating championships.
