The government is said to expect that, if it arranges a progressive of Ross or the impeachment of the railway policy, the country will forget the one per cent income tax and give it a renewal of confidence. The railway work would relieve the unemployment situation and help to bring back better times to the province. No announcement is likely to be made until after the House adjourns and possibly not until early in the summer.

It is very likely that any railway work designed to provide a western outlet for the Peace River country will have the backing of the federal government.
