DUNCANNON AT JASPER

Vice-Regal Visitor Enjoying His Stay at Jasper Park

JASPER PARK, July 14.—Lord Duncannon, son of His Excellency, the Earl of Bessborough, officially associated himself with the Canadian west today when he donned a 10-gallon hat, a gaily colored neckerchief and a pair of handsome leather chaps, and rode nearly 20 miles to Maligne Canyon and down the Medicine Lake trail. The party, which included His Lordship's cousin, Arthur Ponsonby, and his aide-de-camp, Major Bollam, and seven other riders made camp by the side of the trail and the distinguished visitors were entertained in true western fashion.

Betraying great admiration for the artistic way in which one of the Jasper Park cowboys rolled a cigarette in one hand, Lord Duncannon took tobacco and cigarette papers and enjoyed his first lesson. He was not particularly successful and has decided to stick to tailor-mades, until he acquires greater proficiency.

Today the party will climb Whistler Mountain. They have laid out a strenuous program of trail riding and mountain climbing for their stay at Jasper Park Lodge where they will remain until Friday morning when they will leave on the Canadian National Railways "Continental Limited" for the Pacific Coast.

Twenty Years Ago In Prince Rupert

July 14, 1911

From midnight until noon today, the Grand Trunk Pacific wharf was a very busy place with many boats landing and departing. Among the steamers in during the morning were the Princess Mary, City of Seattle, Prince Albert, Venture, State of California and ss Prince Rupert. This evening the Camosun will be in.

A camera man of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway publicity department, with his assistants, is now on the way to Prince Rupert to take local scenes for advertising purposes.

A jury, which yesterday afternoon before Coroner J. H. McMullin, investigated the circumstances of the death earlier in the week of John Stussli, employee on government wharf construction, found that he had lost his life as a result of injuries sustained when he fell from a scaffolding. The jury consisted of H. S. Wallace, G. R. T. Sawle, Thomas McClymont, J. C. Halsey, H. G. Helgeson and J. A. Smith.

Local Audience Hears About Vancouver Island Solarium In Address By Its Director

The first ideal of the founders of the Royal Alexandra Solarium at Mill Bay, Vancouver Island, is the prevention of illness in delicate children; the second, to afford prolonged treatment and education for crippled and sick children who require it; the third, to train such children in some trade or profession, which they may be found per capita. If parents could pay, they were asked for a fee of $6 per week. Thus the actual cost of $2.25 per day was nearly met. The solarium, since its establishment had treated 230 patients including the children now there. A new building had recently been erected toward the cost of $23,000 the Shriners had contributed $10,000.

Results of Treatment
Turning to the results of the treatment, Dr. Wace explained that it was more often impossible to cure deformities but disease was always practically eliminated. As for infantile paralysis, if it were caught early enough, deformities could be prevented.

Dr. Wace continued to tell of the efforts that, finally, were made to place the cured children in suitable occupations so they might make of themselves useful and self-supporting citizens.

Concluding, Dr. Wace declared that the institution and its founders would strive to carry on until that happy time had arrived when there was not a single crippled child in British Columbia who had not a fair chance.

Dr. Wace thanked Mayor Orme and George Rorie for the opportunity that had been provided for him to speak in Prince Rupert. The mayor, making suitable opening and closing remarks, told of a visit he, himself, had paid not long ago to Royal Alexandra Solarium where a great work was being carried on amid ideal surroundings and conditions.

Dealing with the second principle or ideal, that of affording prolonged treatment and education for crippled children, Dr. Wace referred to the necessity of long treatment for the effects of such maladies as infantile paralysis. General hospitals were neither equipped or fitted to give such specialized and lengthy treatment. Cheerfulness and happiness of surroundings were most important and pity was the last thing to be desired. Many crippled children possessed brilliant intellects but there was an inferiority complex which must be eradicated.

Origin of Idea
Dr. Wace then went on to tell of the origin of the idea of the solarium in this province. It had been conceived in 1926 and, on March 1, 1927, the first unit was opened with accommodation for 32 children. The situation was on what was known as Mill Bay, 30 miles north of Victoria, four miles from the railway and of easy access by road. The site was sheltered and the climate there ideal. It was a long, low building with folding windows, making the interior practically the same as being in the open air. There were play-room and bathing pool but no operating room. The staff consisted of lady superintendent, two graduate nurses, ten assistants supplied from student nurses of the Infants' Hospital in Vancouver. There were two school teachers who were always active. The institution had sent up pupils for entrance examinations and they had been successful in the tests.

Mental and physical exercises were given freely and efforts made to increase the powers of resistance to disease. The diet was simple and fresh fruits and vegetables played an important part. Fresh air and sea baths were an important factor in the treatment but, most important of all, was the great curing sun. The doctor digressed to a brief discussion of the important rays, many of which still remained while others were probably still unknown. Exposure of the whole body to the sun and rays was important. Particularly was this so in tuberculosis. Children to be admitted to the solarium must have at least normal mentality, Dr. Wace explained. They could not be afflicted with active tuberculosis of the lungs or in immediate need of surgical treatment. Boys up to 12 years of age and girls up to 14 were admissible and there was no bar on account of either race or creed. There was no limit to the length of treatment. Toward the treatment of the patients, the provincial government made its regular hospital grant of 70¢ per day per capita and the municipality concerned also usually paid the same

SEA STORY ON SCREEN

"Way of a Sailor" Proves Thrilling Entertainment With Some Dramatic Sequences

A free and boisterous tale of ships and sailormen, with some moments of drama and others of thrill and suspense, is the nature of "Way of a Sailor," current offering at the Capitol Theatre which opened last night. The big thrill, and a very realistic one too, comes in the latter stages of the picture and surrounds a daring rescue in an enormous Atlantic storm. This episode is carried out in a most excellent way.

The star of "Way of a Sailor" is John Gilbert, who turns in a good performance in this, one of his few talks to date. Leila Hyams, as the feminine lead, and Wallace Beery and Jim Tully are also among the featured players. Polly Moran has a minor role in the cast.

Duncan Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Miller, is now able to be able out and take short walks after having been confined to his bed for a year or more with spinal trouble. He is now progressing most satisfactorily toward complete recovery.
