WHAT BRISBANE SAYS

Arthur Brisbane, the editorial writer for dozens of American and a few Canadian newspapers, when giving advice to newspaper writers says: "Read as much as you can of the best writers and read Shakespeare all through life. Compared to the rest of literature, he is like the Pacific Ocean compared to the chain of Great Lakes. The lakes are respectable but they are not the Pacific."

PLENTY OF MONEY

Yesterday the local brokers realized for the first time in a year or two that Prince Rupert people really had plenty of money and all that was needed was some special stimulus to start them buying. This came in home the news that silver was going up, that all securities were destined to go to higher prices and that wheat was also due to be selling near the dollar

There was a deluge of buying orders which continued all day and well on into the evening. While the chief demand was for silver stocks, standard eastern issues have been purchased and the very cheap local mining stocks.

Until ysterday many people had an idea that there was no money in the city. Now they know that the money is here and only the urge to spnd is need to cause a break of the buyers' strike.
