Pulp and Paper

Timber Becoming Scarce.

Canada produces annually about $100,000,000 worth of pulp and paper products. During the past ten years, especially, the industry has made rapid progress, until it is now one of the most important in the country. The three outstanding requisites for the maintenance of the industry are large accessible forest areas, particularly of spruce and balsam, adequate cheap power, preferably water-power, and a plentiful supply of labor. As to the two former, nature has been prodigal in her gifts to Canada. Water-power is not only abundant but is widely distributed. The virgin coniferous forests of Eastern Canada were of vast extent, and it is perhaps not entirely surprising that the early settlers and explorers considered them to be all but illimitable.

But, for at least thirty years, keen observers have foreseen the possibility and, indeed, the probability, of exhausting the natural supply of pulpwood. The rapid growth of the paper industry has brought the time within measurable distance. The larger producers of paper, particularly in Quebec and Northern Ontario, where the industry is mainly centred, have scented the danger and have taken initial steps to put the pulpwood forests on a permanent basis.

On the North Pacific there are still large tracts of pulpwood forests, especially that part centering around Prince Rupert. In the East reforestation is necessary, but anywhere up this coast Nature does the work most effectually. The forest department at Victoria in charge of M. A. Grainger, under the Minister of Lands, studies local conditions and modern methods of protection and possible propagation.

The need of using some of the timber on this coast is necessary in any scheme of conservation. After a tree becomes a certain age and size, it ceases to grow and begins to decay. If the trees are not cut when they are ready, there is a constant wastage and the land is not producing. As soon as the crop is cut, reforestation takes place and the young trees begin to grow.

To conserve the forest the trees in the older forests must be cut. That shows that there is need from an economic viewpoint to establish pulp mills in this neighborhood in order that the next crop of trees may have a chance to grow.

Lumber is King
In This District.

Just now lumber is king in this district. It is the business to which we look to make things busy here during the coming spring. Mills are reopening, loggers will soon be going into the woods and there is every prospect of a very busy season. As Prince Rupert is the entrepot for the Queen Charlotte Islands business it is plain to see that we shall stand to benefit very largely by the developments of the next few months.

Silver Output
Is Very Large.

The silver output in this district for the present year is 915,000 ounces valued at well over a million dollars. Last year the output was 408,000 ounces, so that the output has more than doubled. Next year it will be many times greater, judging by preparations that are being made to ship from many of the rich mines of the district, particularly at Alice Arm, Stewart and Hazelton.

Everything points to a mining boom in the spring. Alice Arm and Stewart particularly are in the public eye as producing centres and the entry of the Guggenheims into Hazelton has brought that camp well to the fore, especially as the mines have been producing steadily there for a number of years and the value of the deposits are well known.
