

SCHMELING TOUR PLAN

Heavyweight Champion to Take Trip Through United States

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Details of Max Schmeling's forthcoming tour of the United States were announced here yesterday. The trip will take ten weeks and is expected to net the Teuton some $150,000.

The heavyweight champion will start his trip at Baltimore on February 10 and will box three-round exhibitions with a sparring partner in 45 cities before starting intensive training for his title bout in June with Young Stribling.

In five Texas cities where he is barred from boxing, Schmeling will make his public appearance by refereeing wrestling bouts, thus emulating Jack Dempsey.

The German will visit 14 states, mostly in the south. He will visit Havana, Cuba, on February 22. This will be the high light of his tour.

HAMBURG, Germany, Jan. 21.—Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, sailed from here on the Europa today for the United States. Just before leaving, Schmeling said: "I will show them that I am not merely a paper champion and that I have not turned yellow."

DOC SNELL TO FIGHT

Popular Lightweight to Appear in Ring at Wenatchee to Help Out Sport Interest

WENATCHEE, Jan. 21.—Not for the purpose of staging a personal come-back but rather in an attempt to build up new interest in sports here, Doc Snell, popular lightweight, announced yesterday his intention of returning to the ring here on February 2. He does not intend to box in Seattle, Portland or any of the coast cities but will confine his activities to this, his home town. His first opponent has not yet been named.

Snell first took up professional boxing in 1921 and during his career became very popular.

DEMPSEY TRAINING

Speculation Rife As to Whether He Will Meet Sharkey

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Old John Dempsey has started daily workouts again and speculation is, therefore, rife as to whether or not he intends to take up Jack Sharkey's challenge and return to the ring in the attempt to make at least one more financial killing.

While he weighs 203 pounds, about eight pounds above his best weight, and is carrying a little excess flesh around the waist, the former champion appeared yesterday to be in great shape. There was the same old zip and dash of former years.

Dempsey would say nothing definite yesterday as regards his future intentions. He expressed the opinion that $2,000,000 fight gates in United States had died with Tex Rickard.

It is the opinion of boxing experts in this country that a Dempsey-Sharkey match would be the most attractive fight affair that could be staged in the United States today and would draw the largest gate.

CANADIENS WIN AGAIN

Flying Frenchmen Increase Their Hockey Lead—Bruins Also Stretch Their Margin

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Canadiens increased their lead at the top of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League last night by defeating the Rangers in overtime. Rivers, the young forward, scored the winning goal for the "Flying Frenchmen."

The Rangers' defeat, coupled with Detroit Falcons' victory over the lowly Philadelphia Quakers, created a tie for third place in the American division between the Rangers and Detroit.

At Boston, the Bruins increased their leading margin over the Chicago Black Hawks by defeating Ottawa Senators in a wide open game.

SPORT CHAT

Is King Levinsky, the new fistie sensation of the middle west, destined to attain even greater fame than the former ring celebrity whose name he has adopted, or is he to burn out quickly as did "Shuffle" Callahan, an earlier Chicago clouter? Of course one must remember the meteoric rise and fall of the hard punching Shuffle. He stepped down from the driver's seat of a motor moving van about five years ago and became an overnight sensation in the Windy City by virtue of a powerful left arm and fist. He hit like the Hammer of Thor. Anyone he tagged went down and never got up until after the count of ten. He tagged Johnny Mendiesohn, a seasoned and capable campaigner; he tagged Morrie Schlaifer, rugged Omaha welterweight contender who had never been stopped; and he tagged Bobby Barrett, the hard punching if rather frail Philadelphian. Chicago felt sure that "Shuffle" would lift the 147-pound crown then worn by Mickey Walker. How could he miss? Who could stand up under that withering wallop? Chicago admitted he was crude but insisted that anyone who packed his punch could win without a jab.

Shortly after the fight with Barrett, Callahan went east to Cleveland to tackle Tommy Freeman, the current welterweight champion but then a comparatively unknown "contender." Most of Chicago's fistie elite went along with "Shuffle" and backed him with their coin. Freeman, however, proved that a rugged boxer must not necessarily concede defeat to a murderous puncher. Callahan was slaughtered, knocked out in the eleventh round, and he never got over the licking. Waleott Langford, a dusky second-rater, stopped him shortly after. So did Jock Malone. Within a year he was passe, and for a time thought to be punch-drunk, although several doctors recently declared he was physically and mentally sound. Thus did "Shuffle" go up and down the ladder like a rookie fireman at a three-alarm blaze. That is why we wonder if King Levinsky will ever really be a king.

Levinsky stepped down from a fish peddler's delivery wagon to take up the so-called "manly art." He started as an amateur and as far as we can learn only won one fight. That one was won by a knockout and, in his enthusiasm, he turned "pro." Strange to say, although awkward and devoid of boxing skill he continued to win by knockouts and captured 36 of his last 41 fights in that manner. Just as Callahan suddenly stepped into the spotlight by stopping Mendiesohn and Schlaifer, so did Levinsky become a sensation by stopping Leo Lonski and Tom Kirby. Lonski had met the best of them without having heard the bardies sing. Kirby knows every trick about clinching and stalling that was ever set down in the book. So it must be admitted that Levinsky can slug.

Whether he can slug fast enough to whip a high class boxer who will not fold up from a punch on the elbow is a question. He was not impressive in a recent bout with the clever Jimmy Slattery, but those behind him point out that he is still young and inexperienced. Well, we shall see. If he knocks out a few more headliners he will be well on the way to making more than the original Levinsky ever made and the original made plenty. Which would be funny. "Battling" Levinsky was one of the smartest boxers to ever pull on a glove. King Levinsky thinks a hook is only used to catch those fish he used to peddle.

CHANGING OF RINGS

New York Commission to Eliminate Further Heeney-Baer Fiascos

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The New York State Boxing Commission is taking steps to prevent a repetition of the fiasco which took place last Friday evening at Madison Square Garden when Tom Heeney, veteran New Zealand heavyweight, was technically counted out in favor of Max Baer, the big Californian, after he had been pushed back through the ropes from the press seats into which he had stumbled. Heeney got back in the ring and was resting on his knee when the count of eight came. Referee Jack Dempsey, however, continued to count him out. The Boxing Commission plans to

BOY SCOUTS ENTERTAINED

Girl Guides Were Hostesses Them Last Evening

First company of Girl Guides entertained the members of the Boy Scout Troop last night in Cathedral Hall. Games and competitions were enjoyed and not an important feature of the proceedings was the presentation by St. L. McIntosh, president of the Girl Guides Association, of proficiency badges and service stars a number of the girls. During proceedings delicious refreshments were served.

The girls challenged the boys a series of relay events and were successful in winning all six. The girls' team consisted of Patricia Leader Lucille Brooksbank, Patricia Second Francis Lizney and Grace Jean Vincent, Grace Walker, Alice Halberg, Lillian Jones, Eileen Silversides and Freda Mullen. The boys' team consisted of Bobby Houston, George Vigney, Walter Smith, Victor Miller, Naylor, Andrew Dybbavn and Martin Erickson.

Girl Guides to whom proficiency badges were presented by Mrs. McIntosh were as follows:

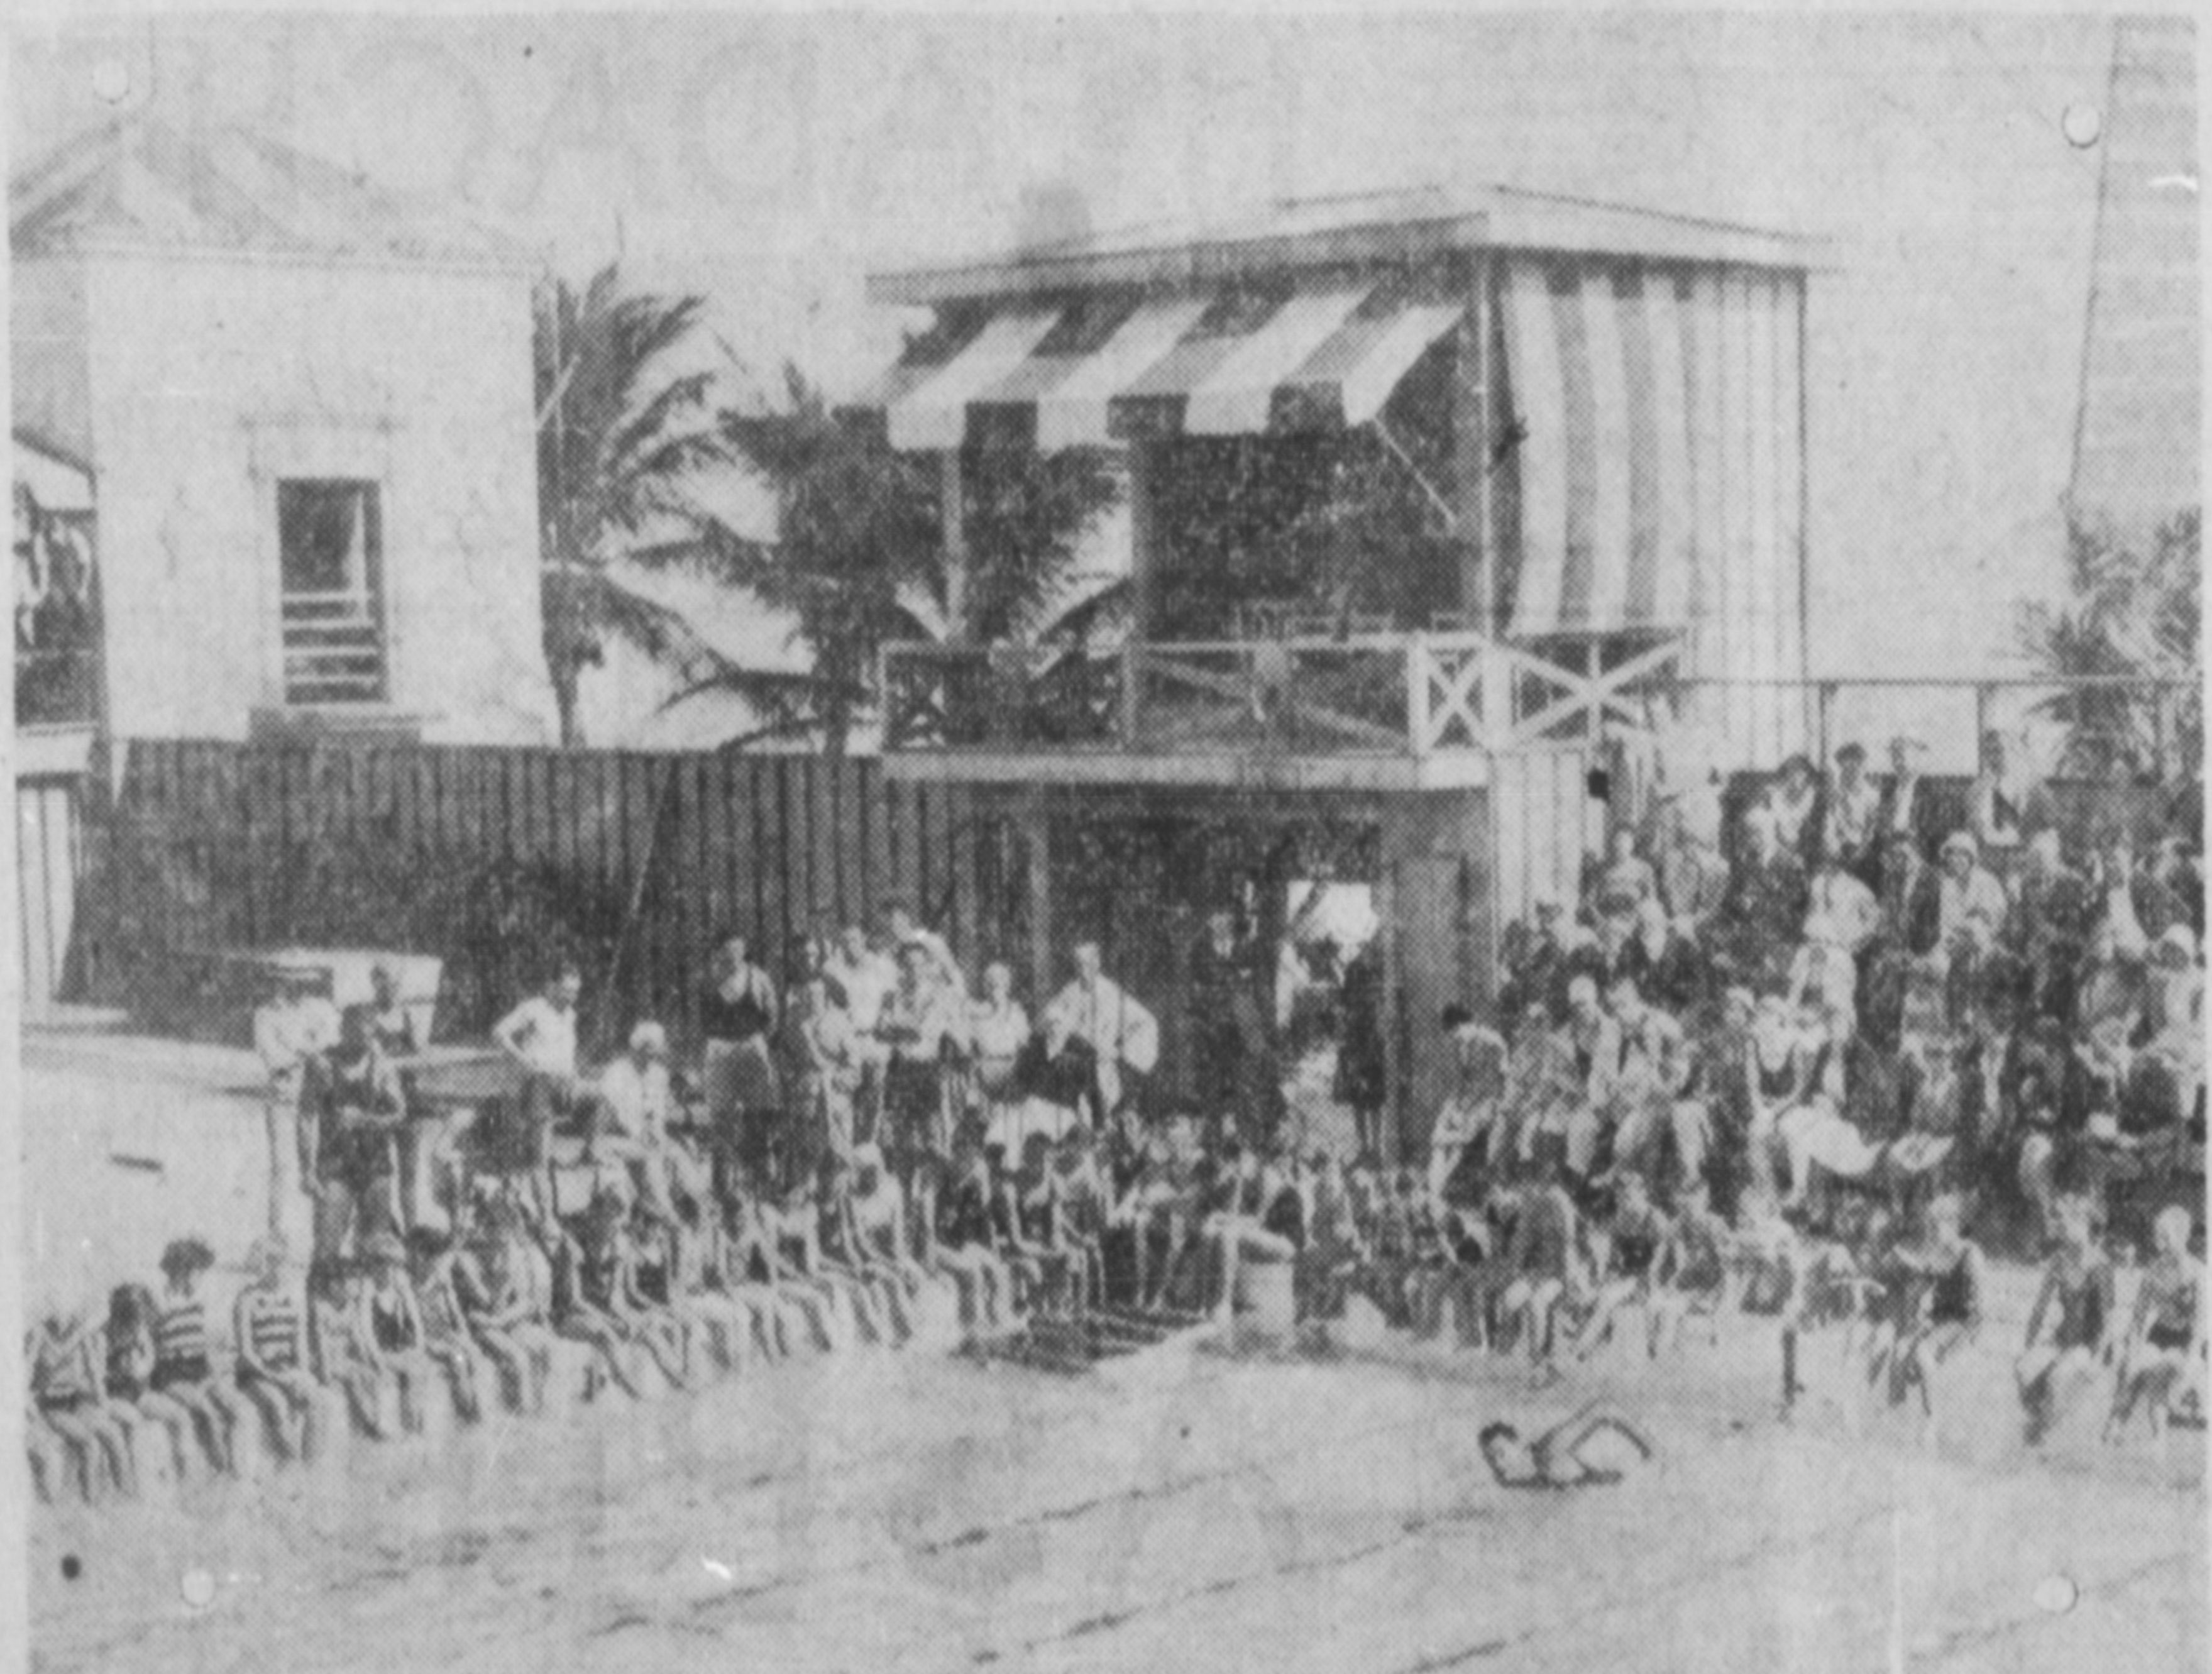

Patrol Leader Lucille Brooksbank, child nurse, cyclist and needlewoman.

Patrol Leader Kathleen Klein, sick nurse.

Patrol Leader Annie Katch, class all round cards, health, etc.

Patrol Second Edith Brewster, first class cook, domestic service. Service stars were presented to Guides Jean McLean, Jean Vigney, Daphne Hemmell, Lillian Jones, Iris Corbould, Alice Halberg, Eileen Silversides, Nancy Dawes, Patricia Silversides, Dorothy Grimble and Merle West.

re-arrange the construction of rings whereby there will be a greater distance between the ropes on the edge of the platform, thus eliminating the possibility of boxers being over the edge and being sent back. There would be no change in the size of the ring.
