Hazelton Won Baseball Game From Smithers

HAZELTON, July 23.—Hazelton maintained its winning streak, which has been unbroken since July 1, by clouting out a 9-7 victory over Smithers here Sunday afternoon. Slightly wild pitching both by Warner for Smithers and York for Hazelton slowed up the game somewhat which in other respects was demonstrative of good baseball. York, however, worked well in the pinches. Smithers took a two-run lead in the first but this was soon overcome and the teams battled on even terms practically all the way until the seventh when Hazelton drove in four runs bringing their total to nine and giving them a lead of three. A last desperate attempt to wipe out this deficit netted the visitors only a single counter and the game ended.

For Hazelton, Ingram, behind the bat, was especially effective. Smithers was unable to steal a single base. The batteries: Hazelton, York and Ingram. Smithers, Warner and Tait.

SPORT CHAT

Elks and Old Empress will tangle tonight at Acropolis Hill in their first encounter in the second half of the local baseball season, in the quest for city championship and possession of the Orme Cup. The game, which should attract a larger crowd than usual, is being staged as a benefit for Eddie Smith, second sacker for the Sons of Canada, who twisted his ankle in the Ketchikan series on May 24, and was forced to resort to crutches for three or four weeks as a result. It is to be hoped that weather conditions are favorable and a good crowd turns out.

It is a peculiar thing, but baseball this year has been played more regularly and the teams are stronger as a whole than in former seasons, yet the crowds continue to be small, and officials are finding it difficult to finance the games. Perhaps, if a good sized crowd turns out for tonight's game, more will get the habit and become regular fans.

SMUTS WILL PRESIDE AT GATHERING

Meeting of British Association This Year is Notable One Celebrating Centenary

LONDON, July 23.—Never before throughout the history of the existence of the British Association for the Advancement of Science have so many eminent scientists been present at any of its annual gatherings as will come together at the centenary meeting, to be held in London next September. The greatest men known in science will flock to the English metropolis from all parts of the globe to take part in the deliberations over which General Smuts is to preside.

It will be the first time for the association to meet in London. Apart from his qualifications for the post he is to occupy, General Jan Christiaan Smuts' engaging and attractive personality will be no small factor in ensuring the success of a meeting which is destined to be notable and outstanding in the annals of this great scientific body. The former Prime Minister of South Africa is President of the Association.

The centenary of Faraday's discovery induction could not be more fittingly celebrated than in conjunction with that of the association. This celebration is to take the form of an exhibition arranged by the Royal Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Federal Council of Chemistry, and other scientific organizations.

The exhibition, which is to be in the Albert Hall, will illustrate in an effective and fascinating manner the debt which the world owes to the great English discoverer. A statue of Faraday will be in the centre of the display. At his feet one of his first experiments will be shown and the actual material he used—a piece of wire, a magnet, and a drop of mercury. From this will spread, like the spokes of a wheel from its hub, numerous exhibits showing the marvellous development of the use of electricity in varied forms, which has followed from the first simple experiment.

The proceedings of the British Association begin on September 21 and continue till the 30th. In former years it has been the practice for the president to be installed in office and deliver his address in the evening of the first day. On this occasion there is to be an innovation. General Smuts will declare open the Faraday exhibition to "the general public" on the afternoon of the 23rd, and then at once assume the presidency of the association in succession to Professor F. O. Bower. Immediately afterwards he receives the invited delegates of societies and institutions, and of universities, colleges, and cities in which the association has held meetings in the past. At night, in the Central Hall, Westminster, General Smuts will deliver his presidential address.

MINISTER OF MINES OPTIMISTIC IN A REVIEW OF INDUSTRY

Comments Courage
"Leading mining executives are to be commended on the courage, resourcefulness and technical ability displayed, which has enabled our industry to come through a most depressing period with a minimum of hardship to those engaged in mining, and dependent on it for their daily sustenance. I cannot allow the opportunity to pass without paying a tribute to those who form the rank and file of the industry. They are displaying a sense of responsibility and loyalty which is highly commendable. The enterprise and optimism of the prospector are extremely gratifying."

"One of the most encouraging features of present conditions is the interest displayed in prospecting. There are more men in the field than have been the case for many years, and I am hopeful that the result will be the discovery and opening up of new sources of production both in respect of lode and placer mining."

"With the improvement in world conditions that is now gradually appearing, a steady expansion of our mining industry in the future seems certain."

NEARLY THREE MILLION WOMEN IN RUSSIA WERE ENGAGED IN PRODUCTIVE WORK LAST YEAR

band. Communal laundries also are provided.

When approaching motherhood, factory and agricultural workers are allowed four months cessation from work with full pay; office workers are given three months.

A woman operator of a Moscow tramcar was asked how she liked the work in comparison to household duties.

"I wouldn't go back to domestic drudgery," she said. "Why shouldn't I like this work? Here, we are able to do things and see the achievement of actual results. Besides, they like us on street cars. They consider us safer operators than men. My husband is at work all day. Why shouldn't I contribute also?"

"Our two children? They are being cared for by expert nurses and are being educated in kindergartens under better advantages than we otherwise could provide for them. They are infinitely better off this way. My husband? He feels about it exactly as I do."

Before she started her car, she explained that her salary is about 80 roubles (approximately $40) per month, and that this, combined with her husband's income, permits them to maintain a maid to keep their room in order and prepare necessary meals.

Government figures show that in 1930, 2,975,283 women were engaged in productive work in the Soviet Union and that 107,000 took active parts in political work. The addition of 1,500,000 women to this number is contemplated for 1931.

Hundreds now act as judges and assistants in court proceedings and many occupy positions of importance in various government departments.

There are women militia, equivalent to municipal police, whose skirts alone distinguish them from their male companions. Uniforms, helmets, side-arms are the same. In Moscow, many women are operators and conductors on tram cars and auto busses. In the agricultural districts they are found not only in the fields but as drivers and mechanics of tractors. In the factories and on large construction projects the picture is the same.

Two thousand women are engaged in manual labor at the great Dnieprostroy power project. During concrete operations on the dam, women members of "shock brigades," the front line troops of workers, outdid the male brigades in completing their work.

The Soviets hold the theory that it is especially the duty of women to master technique and they claim to have found this justified extensively by the example they set their men folk in their enthusiasm and will to work.

ROTARY CLUB SPEAKER

The speaker at the Rotary Club today was C. H. McLean, transmission superintendent of the E. C. Telephone Co. at Vancouver and with him was B. R. Tupper, radio engineer. Mr. McLean gave a very interesting account of the experimental work they were doing. Others at the luncheon were Superintendent Massey of the city telephone department, John Forsythe of Vancouver, and Manager Robertson of the Royal Bank.
