Finances Of Old Land Have At Last Been Balanced With Handy Margin To Spare---Chamberlain

Income Taxes Are Not Decreased and Beer Imposts Remains the Same—Tribute Paid By Chancellor of Exchequer to Model Set By Lord Snowden Last Fall

LONDON, April 19:—Great Britain has balanced the budget with a surplus of 796,000 pounds (nearly $4,000,000 at par), Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, informed Parliament in his budget speech today. There will be no decrease in income taxes and the beer tax will remain at its present level. Only a few taxation changes are proposed.

"Lord Snowden, who presented the budget in September, gave the country a model of severe, salutary finance," said the Chancellor of the Exchequer, "and today we have the satisfaction of reporting that his anticipations have been fulfilled." Mr. Chamberlain said that the estimates had been realized with a surplus of £9,000,000 better than Lord Snowden expected to get.

Revival of trade and employment within the past few months gave Great Britain reason to hope that the worst of her economic depression was over, the Chancellor added.

WOULD HAVE BIG CHANGE

Northern Province Endorsed By Burns Lake Newspaper to Get Justice

The Burns Lake Observer is out with an editorial article endorsing the idea of a new province for the northern part of British Columbia and Alberta in interests of primary producers. It says:

"More and more we are becoming convinced of the necessity of a realignment of the two western provinces, or else the creation of a new province embracing the northern half of British Columbia and Alberta. Let those who advance the argument that we have too many provinces now, boost the amalgamation of the south of the two western provinces (perhaps Saskatchewan should be included also) into one province and the north into another. The names would be easy to arrive at. Let the south be called British Alberta and the north Northern Columbia—but let us not split upon a name.

"In every matter that comes up the north is ignored or deliberately slapped down. Now the Royal Commission on harbors has suggested that northern interests be sacrificed and Vancouver and the railroads 'subsidized' at the expense of the whole farming community and area of the Peace River.

"This new Canadian empire is to be put under tribute to the railroads and to Vancouver harbor, so the report suggests. The report on the Peace River railway outlet developed along similar lines and evidence is not wanting that, if the great financial interests have their way, the north will develop only when and if it may be exploited to pay the interest charges on southern investments. That an agitation for a new alignment of provincial boundaries is about twenty years too late, we admit, and we doubt if much will come of it until this present system breaks of its own inertia—an inertia aggravated by the (Continued on Page 3)
