This Clergyman Is Active Worker and Bicyclist at 93

A correspondent of the British Weekly tells of Rev. Frederick Hastings of Eastbourne, who, at the age of 93 may safely be acclaimed as the oldest, active bicyclist in Great Britain. Mr. Hastings is still able to preach twice each Sunday.

The same correspondent tells of nine other bicyclists who are more than 60 years old and under 70; 20 are 70 or over and under 80 and five are 80 or more years old, among them being Albert Arthur Cater, a Bristol evangelist, who will be 89 next March.

Among Britain's oldest cyclists the same correspondent mentions a remarkable Yorkshire woman, who, at the age of 95, continues to cycle her two miles a day but, as her machine is a tricycle, he does not consider that she should be classed with the others.

All of these veteran cyclists, says the British Weekly, will agree with Professor J. B. S. Haldane, the famous biologist, who writes that "for the business man who has no time nor, perhaps, inclination for exercise a short daily bicycle ride is the ideal solution to this problem of keeping fit," and when he adds that "many of our ill of civilized life would be cured if the 'invalids' would take up cycling."

SPORT NOTES

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, has many problems. One is to keep the waistline and the bankroll of Ruth down to moderate proportions. Another is to keep Lefty Gomez's weight up to the accepted standard. When Mr. Gomez first joined the Ruppert payroll he weighed 150 pounds, which was much too light for his six feet two. So it was decided that he should be sent to a health farm. The farm Ruppert decided upon was at Saratoga, Cal. Mr. Gomez was sent there and commanded to subsist on a diet of milk and cheese. For three winters he did this.

"I drank so much milk I am ashamed to look a cow in the face," he tells you, with less originality than you would expect from a left hander. "Still, I wouldn't have minded it so much if there weren't so many old women around. They were all 50 or 60 years old and I was the only man in the place. It even got to a point where I was in love with the cheese."

Mr. Gomez went on tour with an all-star team after the season closed. "Funny thing about that," he says, "I hadn't been pitching very long before I found I had a curve ball. Ain't that just like a left hander—waiting until the season is over to find out that you can throw a curve ball?"

Gomez, it seems, had his heart in these games—but mostly it was for June O'Dea. He threatened to quit the tour in Sacramento. He hadn't got a letter in days from the gal. "I'll pitch this game and after that I'm through," he warned Al Schacht, the team manager. Schacht knew what was wrong.

It was the fourth inning. The touring team was trailing 3 to 1 and Gomez was pitching. Overcome by an inspiration, Schacht rushed out to the third base coaching line and held up three letters. "Look at these, Lefty!" he shouted. "From her?" asked Mr. Gomez. "Yes," nodded Schacht. The Sacramento team didn't get a hit the rest of the way. The three letters were addressed to Schacht. They were "please remit" documents from Billy Taub, the tailor.

SCHMELING TO FIGHT

German Champion Prepared to Meet Jack Sharkey in 15 Rounds in June

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, world heavyweight boxing champion, announced last night that Schmeling was prepared to meet Jack Sharkey in a 15-round bout for the title in June.

Jacobs explained that Schmeling was tired of being accused of dodging Sharkey and was prepared to meet the Boston gob any time and any where. The champion's only stipulation was that the bout should be of at least 15 rounds duration.

Schmeling is not recognized as the champion by the New York Boxing Commission on the grounds that he avoided a meeting with Sharkey, who is rated by the Commission as the outstanding heavyweight.

First Half Honors in Senior Basketball League Are to Be Settled This Week

Three-Two Taxi and Canadian National Recreation Association will meet in the Senior Basketball League tonight to decide who will play Panthers on Friday night in a final play-off for first half honors in the league. This was decided last night at a meeting of the Prince Rupert Basketball Association. The extra games have become necessary owing to the three-way tie existing at the end of the regular schedule for the first half of the season.

The meeting appointed a committee consisting of William Mitchell, Bob Irvine, Dan Morrison and Ernie Ratchford to arrange practice hours for the teams.

Presiding over last evening's meeting was J. W. Plummer, president of the Prince Rupert Basketball Association.

Difficulties arising from the first half were ironed out by the meeting and the stage set for an interesting second half.

There was a general feeling among the players and the executive that they were not getting the support of the public as they should. For years basketball has been struggling to get a foothold in this town and now that there is every facility as regards a building and an organized league of four different grades of basketball it is thought unfair that the sport does not get more support.

SKIING AT SMITHERS

New Line of Winter Sport is Going Strong in Interior Railway Town

There was considerable excitement on Sunday at Smithers when the official opening of the Smithers Ski Club's new ski jump took place, according to word reaching the city from the interior railway town. Keen interest was taken by numerous spectators as well as many participants in the sport.

An active winter season is anticipated by the Smithers Ski Club and next month it is planned to have a big meet in which representatives of many interior centres compete.

Snow conditions are now reported to be ideal at Smithers for skiing sport.
