QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS

(Prepared by a Resident of Long Standing)

RESOURCES

The Queen Charlotte Islands have the last and only great stand of Sitka Spruce in the world.

The Queen Charlotte Islands have the largest stand of Cypress or yellow cedar in the world. This timber for railroad ties will outlast treated or creosoted ties as three to one. There are millions of yellow cedar poles on the Islands and it is believed by many that a very high grade of turpentine can be extracted from the trees; also oil for mining and flotation purposes.

Queen Charlotte Islands have very large red cedar timber stands. When recently examined by Japanese experts it was pronounced to be the toughest and best in the world. Large quantities of this timber are suited for piling, which when treated with creosote will outlast fir four to one. There are millions of feet of alder on the Islands for which there is said to be a ready market in Japan.

Queen Charlotte Islands have over 100 miles of gold-bearing sand on the east and north coast beaches.

Extensive copper deposits and gold-bearing quartz are known to exist. Also antimony, iron and other ore showings have attracted considerable attention.

For many years oil prospectors have been attracted by oil seepages at various points. There are extensive oil shale beds and evidences of natural gas. Coal is known to underlie a considerable part of the country.

SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE

The Islands are a sportsman's paradise. Black bear are numerous, and there are also plenty of deer, wild cattle, ducks, geese, pheasants and quail. King salmon can be caught with a trolling hook.

Pink salmon abound in countless numbers and Chums run up the creeks in the proper season.

The Islands have fine razor clams and scallop clams, said to be the only extensive beds in the British Empire. The scallop, a rival to the oyster, has not yet been introduced to the world's markets. They are found in the neighborhood of Naden Harbor, Rose Spit, Tow Hill and Skidegate Inlet.

Crabs abound in the waters adjacent to the mouths of streams on the north and east coast of Graham Island.

Other commercial fish found in the adjacent waters include grey fish, sable, various varieties of flat fish, herring and sardines.

THE CLIMATE

The climate of the Islands is mild and tourists who wish to get out of the beaten paths will find it a wonderful change from usual routes of travel. There is a great field for archeological and natural history studies, for mining ventures, for timber industries, for oil speculation, for sport or just as a place to loaf and enjoy life.
