HURRICANE SEASON ON

Government Issues Warning to Residents of South Sea Islands

SUVA, Fiji Islands, Jan. 8.—This is the hurricane season in the South Seas and the government has issued its warnings to islanders and mariners. Whether or not the government warnings are accurate, they are closely observed and when "dirty" weather is predicted schoolers scurry for cover and residents of Suva and other Fiji towns batten up windows and doors.

In Suva the sound of the hurricane gun on the waterfront is the signal for a battery of hammering to break out over the town and suburbs. In a remarkably short space of time the shopping centre is battered down with huge shutters over shop fronts, an effect which does not add to the beauty of the town.

If the signal happens to be a false alarm the shutters cautiously come down, but it is not unusual for them to remain up for the best part of a week until all danger is over. This proved to be the case last season, when several hurricanes were reported but, fortunately for Suva, they struck other parts of the group. They served, however, to keep residents in a state of suspense over varying periods, and shop assistants on the run with hammer and nails.

With prices for its products at a low level Suva is not anxious to entertain a "blow" this season. It is to be hoped that the season will pass off quietly and that the clerk of the weather will not take advantage of the offer of the Fiji Royal Gazette in extending the season another two months. A close season would be more appreciated.

Former Alice Arm Bank Manager Is Off to Cranbrook

S. F. D. Roe, who was manager of the branch of the Royal Bank of Canada at Alice Arm during its existence there, has been transferred from Vancouver, where he has been manager of the Hastings Street East branch for four years, to Cranbrook. Before leaving Vancouver Mr. and Mrs. Roe were presented by a gathering of friends with a handsome silver tea service.

Clara Bow and her brand new husband, Rex Bell, may now be said to have settled down to humdrum domestic life, judging by this breakfast scene.

Financial Post of Toronto Has Article Dealing With B. C. White Elephant

In the latest issue of the Financial Post of Toronto, there is an article on provincial railways in which the P. G. E. is featured as follows:

"The Province of British Columbia owns a railway which had a gross revenue of $480,000 in 1930 but which costs the province $3,000,000 a year. It seems almost impossible to conceive of any government involving itself in an enterprise that would prove so costly, but such is indeed the case in connection with the investment of the province of British Columbia in the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

"The P. G. E. was incorporated in 1912, to build from Vancouver northward to meet the Grand Trunk Pacific line to the ocean. The chief purpose of the line was to colonize the interior of British Columbia, bringing in German settlers. Another hope in the minds of promoters was that the Grand Trunk Pacific would make a suitable operating agreement to route its Vancouver freight over the P. G. E. outlet. The war ended the German settlement scheme, and a consolidation of the Grand Trunk Pacific with the Canadian Northern under government ownership ended whatever hopes there were for using the P. G. E. as the Vancouver outlet.

"The province of British Columbia guaranteed bonds on the enterprise and eventually had to take it over entirely. When the province took over the line it had no connection either with Vancouver or with the northern terminus. The railway is still without suitable southern or northern termini. In brief, it starts nowhere and ends nowhere.

Cost Over Sixty Millions

"The last budget speech of the minister of finance of British Columbia showed that at March 31, 1930, the province had guaranteed bonds of the P. G. E. Railway to the extent of $21,160,000 which meant that this amount was a direct liability to the province. In addition, direct liabilities incurred by extensions amounted to $14,481,801. But on top of these liabilities the province had already assumed large operating and interest deficits on the road. The nearest one can come to an estimate of what the province already has invested in this railroad is the statement made by the Prime Minister March 24 last, to the effect that the total liabilities of the P. G. E. were now $66,650,000 of which $38,000,000 represented outstanding obligations and the remainder consisted of interest and operating deficits already paid by the government.

"British Columbia has made many endeavors to sell the line. None of these have come to fruition. It is doubtful if the line could be sold for more than a few million dollars even if the province were to assume all the capital liabilities presently existing and to write off all its previous contributions on account of interest or operating deficits. The P. G. E. is a road of virtually no present value and a potential value that cannot yet be estimated."

ELECTION SURPRISES

Those Who Sought To Gain Advantages As Also-Rans Some-what Dismayed At Results

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Many successful candidates in the recent general election in Great Britain sustained an embarrassing surprise when they found that they were actually returned as Members of Parliament. They fought what they considered forlorn chances—and won. Several are reported to have entered on a contest which they thought would place them in an "also ran" position because they had an eye to the future rather than the present. The thought that by sustaining what looked as a hopeless fight they would ingratiate themselves with the party chiefs, so that on some future occasion they would be given a much more favorable opportunity of entering the House of Commons.

The London Evening News cites the case of a young member of Parliament who holds an appointment in the distant part of the Empire. He stood for Parliament while he was home on leave; and his victory has placed him in a quandary. For he has had to resign from his lucrative overseas post—which he obviously could not retain by staying in London as a Member of Parliament. His private means are small; and he is now trying to supplement his member's salary of $1800 a year—the original $2000 a year has been cut by 10 per cent. as part of the government economy scheme.

Among the young men who are surprised to find themselves mem-

Cheapest Way of Reaching the People

The cheapest way of reaching practically all the people of Prince Rupert and district is by means of the classified columns of the Daily News.

Nearly everyone has something they could turn into cash through the "For Sale" column. Perhaps they have a house to rent. Here is the chance. Spend 50c on a classified advertisement and secure a tenant rather than have it idle.

If a girl wishes a position or a housewife wishes help, the best means of getting supplied is through a want ad.

Dressmakers sometimes want work; small storekeepers want to move their goods; or maybe you need an article that has been used rather than pay the price for new. Give the Daily News classified columns a trial. Many have been very pleased at the result.
