A WONDERFUL PICTURE

The city outside of the business section was wonderfully beautiful this morning. The rather depressing deep evergreens were all decorated as for a great feast by costly ermine. The stark boughs of the alder were all scintillating with crystals and ermine covered the ground.

FEDERAL CABINET CHANGES

Outstanding new strength is brought to Premier Bennett's federal cabinet by the appointment thereto as minister without portfolio of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Prime Minister. Mr. Meighen will also be a notable acquisition to the Senate of which he has been named a member.

Next in importance in the cabinet changes announced today is the appointment of Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes as minister of finance. Mr. Rhodes has already been acting minister of finance and has shown marked aptitude in that department.

Prince Rupert will be interested in the appointment of Hon. Alfred Duranseau, minister of marine, as acting minister of fisheries. No doubt, a permanent appointment will be made before long in line with the policy of keeping the important department of fisheries separate and distinct from that of the marine.

Hon. W. A. Gordon, taking over the labor portfolio in addition to that of mines and immigration, will, no doubt, find his duties, under present circumstances, arduous and trying enough.

The three other appointments to the Senate, besides that of Mr. Meighen, have been, of course, made along straight political lines.

OPPORTUNITY LOST

An opportunity has certainly been lost by the governments concerned in connection with the construction of the highway east from here. Several hundred men have been fed throughout the winter by the people who pay the taxes and no return has been secured for the money expended.

The present policy, it seems, was ill-conceived and not well carried out. Large sums were expended on camps and many of them have since been evacuated. Tools were purchased and not used. Debts were incurred and many of them have not been paid.

DIFFICULT SITUATION

Everyone must realize the difficulties the governments have had in carrying on and providing money when the money markets of the world have been closed against them. A great deal of sympathy is due them in their difficulties. But why make light of the difficulties? Why should the administration at Victoria pretend that they did not pay their bills because they were too busy in the department instead of because they did not have the money?

Had Thirteen Boils On His Neck

Mrs. E. V. Duncombe, Grassy Lake, Alta., writes: "My husband was covered with boils, having as many as thirteen on his neck at once. He tried everything possible, but nothing did any good until he took Burdock Blood Bitters, and before he had used one bottle the boils were all gone, and he has not been bothered with them since."

Burdock Blood Bitters is sold at all drug and general stores; manufactured for the past 53 years, only by The T. Millar Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

NURSING PIONEER

Hon. Dr. MacLaren, in Address to Nurses at St. John, Describes Life of Jeanne Mance

ST. John, N.B., Feb. 4.—Many are the legends and stories that have grown about the beautiful life of Jeanne Mance, who, when but seven years of age, decided to dedicate her life to the service of God. The first authentic biography to be written in English however, is that by the late Dr. Forgan K.C., Litt. D., LL. B., written several years ago, and published under the auspices of the Religious Hospitalers of St. Joseph, Hotel Dieu, Montreal.

Dr. Forgan aptly and vividly describes the heroic Jeanne Mance, when he writes "A foundress of communities and a nurse by inclination and we might also say, by instinct, a person with lofty ideals and magnificent aims, relying upon the guidance of providence, yet anxious to utilize every human means to attain her ends."

And it was her fine character and achievements that led Hon. Dr. MacLaren to choose as the subject of his address before the graduating class of nurses at General Public Hospital, St. John, "Jeanne Mance, the First Canadian Nurse." In his address Dr. Murray vividly described the story of her life in Canada, the founding under her auspices of the Hotel Dieu at Montreal in 1644, and the life and hardships within this ramshackle building. For a year the little colony was blessed with peace, while they ministered to the sick and destitute. But for a year only, for during the next decade, they were to know the horrors of Indian invasions.

After the foundation of the Hotel Dieu, Dauversiere of La Roche purchased the Island of Montreal thereon to found a hospital and set out for Quebec in 1641 with Maisonneuve as Soldier General, and forty men. They were accompanied by Jeanne Mance, who legend, has it, was the first white woman to set foot on the island.

Many extracts from Dr. MacLaren's address have been reprinted in the published biography, thus showing the approval with which the publishers regard his interest in her life.

Indomitable Courage

Concluding he says, she was "the soul of the expedition that settled in Montreal. Her energy stimulated the lazy, her indomitable courage shamed the timid, her angelic sweetness comforted the sick and wounded. Her life was truly a romance of Christian chivalry. She not only assisted at the birth of the great Canadian metropolis, but powerfully aided by ensuring its continuous existence by inducing colonists to come and settle here and by procuring funds for its maintenance. . . . Some of the old writers speak of her delicate frail appearance, her rare charm, exquisite manners and refinement, inspiring great interest and pity, yet neither terror of the Iroquois nor any difficulty presented to her could daunt her."

"Through everything she maintained the courage of her convictions and persisted in her work. Endowed with an energy that would be remarkable in a man, this frail woman had no fear in leaving her native land and civilization to become a leader in an expedition destined to found a new colony in a strange and barbarous country, and to succor ills and afflictions which were the lot of the colonists in their strife against the elements and the ferocious Iroquois. . . . the necessity of the work to which she had consecrated herself in her fervour of devotion upheld her in her task, for she possessed, unalterable confidence in the Supreme Master."

"Jeanne Mance might well be called the Florence Nightingale of Canada's Nursing System."

Sergeant Andrew Fairbairn, chief of the Smithers' detachment of the provincial police, came down from Smithers to Hazelton on the train which arrived here this morning from the interior.

Man in the Moon

What we all like about Prince Rupert is that the winters are mild and snow is seldom seen.

East is east and west is west but they have a lot in common this winter—coal bills, for instance.

County Constable—Pardon, miss, but swimming is not allowed in this lake.

City Flapper—Why didn't you tell me before I undressed? Constable—Well, there ain't no law against undressin'."

The Colonel touring Europe on his leave of absence, did not forget the one he left behind. His son received a card from Sparta saying: "This is the cliff from which the Spartans used to throw their defective children. Wish you were here!—Dad."

It seems that a local young lady had been decorating the home with evergreen. "How do you like the scheme of holly over spruce?" she asked. "I should prefer mistletoe over yew," was his quick rejoinder.

And so there is to be no war in the Orient after all. It has been a rather interesting peace the last couple of weeks.

Jake says he knew a person who had hay fever so badly he sneezed every time he passed a grass window.

Grocer—You want a pound of ochre? Is it red ochre for painting bricks?

Small Boy—No, it's tappy ochre wot Maw makes puddin' with.

Smithers Chinaman Is Going to Jail

It's got to be good to be ADVERTISED

READ THE GROCERY ADS TODAY

All the king's horses . . . and all the king's men can't make a success out of a bad product. No amount of advertising will create a market for it. The more it's advertised, the more its defects become known.

A Good Product Well Advertised

grows as swiftly and naturally as a healthy plant. People try it and like it. They tell others. They like it. Soon that product is found everywhere . . . and its name, spread abroad by advertising, is on every tongue. When you see something widely and consistently advertised, you can be pretty sure it's well worth having. If it weren't . . . if it didn't represent an honest and worthy value . . . the maker couldn't afford to advertise it.

Look Over the Advertisements in this Paper

Some of these names you know. Others, perhaps, are newcomers, all are entitled to your trust . . . all are here because they have potential friends bringing some new comfort or convenience. But something real to contribute to your advantage . . . your service . . . your happiness.
