New York Aviator Is Back In Puget Sound After Few Hours Out

Broken Oil Line and Shattered Rudder Control Forced Airman Back—Almost Crashed on North End of Vancouver Island After Mishap

SEATTLE, May 30.—Nat C. Browne, New York aviator, returned to Seattle yesterday afternoon following about seven hours of flying due to a broken oil line and broken rudder control. He had taken off from Boeing Field for Tokio at 5:20 yesterday morning. He planned to refuel over the airport today for another start.

Browne said, after landing, that the oil line had broken as he was cruising northward near the north end of Vancouver Island. He was blinded for a while by the hot oil and almost crashed because he was flying low. The rudder control wire of his big Fokker monoplane was broken when the tail assemblage raked a tree as he was trying to climb after leaving the airport here.

DIED HERE ON SUNDAY

Mrs. D. W. Morrissey, One of Prince Rupert's Most Esteemed Pioneer Women, Passes Away

One of Prince Rupert's most widely acquainted and highly esteemed pioneer women was removed when death came at 5:30 yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Moore, Fourth Avenue West, to Mrs. Mary Susanne Morrissey, widow of the late Ald. D. W. Morrissey and a resident of more than twenty years' standing in the city. While Mrs. Morrissey had not been in the best of health for the past few years, it was only a few days ago that she became seriously ill after an attack of influenza. Her passing will be greatly mourned by her numerous friends.

The late Mrs. Morrissey was 65 years of age and was born at Georgetown, P.E.I. A woman of charming personality and sterling qualities, she was a devout member and faithful worker in the Roman Catholic Church but her friends and admirers were by no means confined to circles of the church. She was a past president of the Catholic Women's League, was active in the church and in the community. (Continued on Page Two)

IS ROWING TO SEATTLE

Matthew O'Grady Here in Course of One Thousand Mile Trip With 15-Foot Rowboat

From Petersburg

Has Had Good Weather So Far and Hopes to Reach Puget Sound In July

"There is no work and it is necessary to pass the time and get some exercise," said Matthew O'Grady, Alaska prospector and miner, this morning in explaining the reason why he is at present engaged in a rowing trip from Petersburg, Alaska, to Seattle in a 15-foot rowboat. Mr. O'Grady arrived in the city about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon after having successfully and quite speedily accomplished the first 350 miles of the 1000-mile trip.

Mr. O'Grady set out on May 5 from Petersburg where he had spent the winter. So far the trip has been attended by quite good weather and particularly was this so in rounding Cape Fox between Ketchikan and here. He rows either by day or night, depending upon the weather and the wind. Often he finds it advisable to tie up in the afternoons, when there are brisk winds, and travel by the calm of night. For instance, coming down Clarence Strait, it was necessary to row by night to avoid heavy head winds during the day. Wrangell, Ketchikan and Port Simpson are among ports which Mr. O'Grady has already visited. If he can continue his present rate of speed, he expects to land in Seattle early in July.

Born in Ireland, Mr. O'Grady lived in Canada before the Great War in which he saw service in France as a transport driver with the Royal Army Service Corps. After the war he resided in the United States and is now a naturalized American citizen.

HOOVER IS CRITICAL

Sees Gigantic Pork-Barrel in Speaker Garner's Public Works Program

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 30.—President Herbert Hoover launched a vigorous attack at the week-end upon Speaker John N. Garner's $2,100,000,000 public works relief program, declaring it to be an attempt to make the largest raid upon the public treasury and the setting up of the most gigantic pork-barrel in the history of the United States.

Speaker Garner, in reply, stated that it was his intention to push the measure through the House as speedily as possible so that immediate relief might be given the unemployed.

Speaker Garner added that he had not expected the co-operation of the president for his proposal.
