"The newspaper, with the law, should assume the accused innocent until proven guilty; should be the friend, not the enemy of the general public; the defender, not the invader of private life and the assailant of personal character. It should be, as it were, a keeper of the public conscience."—Henry Watterson.

A FORCE FOR CIVIC PATRIOTISM

Just as charity begins at home, so does patriotism. The best kind of patriotism is civic patriotism. Not the kind that believes in indiscriminate "boosting" of everything and everybody connected with the city, without regard to truth and justice. That is as cheap and misleading as indiscriminate flag-waving and flag worship.

Real patriotism means service, plus unselfishness. Where it is plentifully found, a happy and prosperous community thrives. Where it is not found, communities are not happy and rarely prosperous. The business of a city requires and is responsive to skilled attention just as a private business. Without civic patriotism, that skilled attention is not unselfishly bestowed.

A couple of years ago, Boston, a city famous for its culture, woke up to the fact that civic patriotism was lacking. Conditions around its City Hall became intolerable. Finally the leading commercial and civic organizations forced the Mayor to nominate a body of representative men of the highest ability—the Finance Commission—to probe his administration. These seven men gave freely of their time and experience working without pay for fourteen months. The astounding disclosures of this body of experts aroused the civic consciousness of Boston and united the citizens for better government.

Not only did the Finance Commission point to the evils. They did constructive work. They drafted a new city charter for Boston. They made reforms in the civic laws so sweeping and drastic that the professional politicians gasped with amazement. Within a year's time they achieved the federation of forty different associations, each of which is devoted to some trade, professional or public interest. They engaged for the first time in the history of that city, a skilled railroad traffic manager of the highest standing, to work solely in the interests of Boston and New England. They upset unreasonable and outrageous advances in express rates, which were restricting the markets and industries of Boston and New England.

They secured an appropriation of $1,800,000 for new customs houses suited to the requirements of the great port. They agitated the Federal Government on the question of forest reserves, and secured legislation to protect the New England forests. They secured legislation to erect a High School of Commerce.

The Finance Committee of Boston have rescued the City Hall from the hoodlums and grafters. They have made it the centre of clean and enterprising civic government. They have done more. They have set an example of public spirit and of civic patriotism that other communities might follow.

It is idle to blame "the people" for misrule. Every citizen is one of "the people," a joint sharer in the success or failure of his city.

DEEDS SPEAK LOUDER THAN NAMES

(Collier's Weekly)

Land laws that have made the Irishman contented; tax laws that look to making a rich, storied, and fertile island a paradise for the small farmer; the suffrage for women who have property enough to give their votes weight; old-age pensions that run into a hundred million of dollars; sickness, disability and unemployment insurance for laboring men and women, that will cost fifty millions! Who were the altruists that did this? No altruists at all—just the usual bunch of vote-seeking politicians taking advantage of the world-wide movement for a fairer distribution of wealth, egged on by a Chancellor of the Exchequer who had sympathy for the under dog. What was the chancellor? A rich man, with a taste for philanthropy at the public expense? No—a lawyer, a little Welsh solicitor, who had worked up out of the ruck and knew what it was to be poor. A lawyer! Why, we thought to find the lawyers where the money was. Not always. This lawyer had a heart and a tongue of fire for something better. What republic writes these wonderful, compassionate things on its statute books? What democracy thus keeps its solemn pledge to govern for the people? No republic—unless you speak of it as a crowned one. Neither a republic nor a democracy, if you regard for both, if you regard spirit. To be accurate, a monarchy, with a hereditary House of Lords and all the trimmings. Name, please. Why England.

HAS FOUND MINE OF RARE METAL

John McGrath is Developing Molybdenum on Claim at Observatory Inlet.

Mr. John McGrath, the well known mining prospector, and the original locator of the Portland Canal mine, is now engaged in the development of a deposit of molybdenum, a rare metal which is used for hardening armor plate. The property is located on Alice Arm of Observatory Inlet, about a mile from salt water, and is the only known deposit of this metal on the Pacific Coast of America. Mr. McGrath has done five years of development on it, and has recently made an arrangement with the firm of Atpans & Krool of San Francisco to begin shipments. "It's too bad that all the metal should go to the United States," said Mr. McGrath, "but there is a market for it in the United States and none here, so what can you do?"

SILVER FOUND IN JASPER PARK

Two Men out Staking Claims on G. T. P. Line Near Fort George.

The first find of precious minerals has been made along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific east of Fort George. Silver has been discovered in Jasper Park.

Sandy Johnson and Harry Willis-croft are now on their way to the big Dominion reservation, armed with government permits to stake their claims for the mining of precious minerals.

According to the story of these men, who have been working in the construction camps along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, they started some little time ago to prospect through the country along the line of the railway. Finally, one Sunday, while the grade was being pushed through Jasper Park, they stumbled upon rock that looked as though it would be worth taking away. Closer examination led the men to believe that the samples that they chipped off contained very rich quantities of almost pure silver.

Johnson and Willis-croft kept their mouths tightly sealed as to where they had found the silver. They declared they were not looking for any partners in their enterprise. They went to the land office and there secured the necessary permit that gave them the right to prospect for precious minerals on government land. Jasper Park is a pretty large place and just where these men have made their find is unknown. As to whether the silver will be found in paying quantities is a matter that time will decide. But Johnson and Willis-croft are both confident that their fortunes are made.
