While the Tolmie government is straining every nerve to get the House prorogued so that the present government can remain in office during the election campaign, private members on the government side of the House, however, are by no means complaisant. It is on the cards that within the next 24 hours they will ask the Premier to resign, make either Mr. Berry or Mr. Jones their leader, and authorize the forming of a union government.

There is no real expectation, however, that Dr. Tolmie will resign. In order, if it be in any way possible to avoid that necessity, the business of the session is being speeded up, night sittings having now begun.

The members, however, still have the game in their own hands, for until they vote supply the House cannot very well be prorogued. They appear to be determined on having a showdown.

The opinion is now prevalent that the manoeuvres to form a union government were never really meant to be successful and that the Tolmie-Howe-Pooley combination were intent only on holding on to their respective offices.

The private members are now bitterly aware of the trap into which they have been led in order that the moguls may hold their positions and the emoluments thereof. They desire union government if only for the reason that they know only too well that the political outlook is hopeless for them if anything like the present set-up is maintained.

The issue is rapidly coming to a focus and it is extremely likely that the crash that has been impending throughout the session will occur before the end of the week.
