AMERICAN FISHING BOATS

There is a Canadian law against foreign boats being allowed to call at Canadian ports to land catches of fish, to secure supplies or for any other purpose except to take refuge in time of storm or stress or to secure emergency supplies. This is for the protection of Canadian fisheries and is somewhat similar to laws of other countries.

For the benefit of American halibut fishermen who fish off this coast and also for the benefit of the Canadian railway which carries the fish, United States boats are allowed to land their fish at Prince Rupert under a special order-in-council passed annually, by the Canadian government. They may sell the fish here, paying the duty, or ship in bond to the United States as is usually done. There have been many protests made by Canadians against granting the use of the port on equal terms to American rivals but this has failed to change the views of any of the successive Canadian governments. At the week-end the usual privileges were renewed until May with power given the minister to extend the period to the end of the year.

PRESENT RELIEF PAYMENTS

A member of the unemployed committee has worked out a table showing the amounts received under the present relief scheme against which a protest was made to the Mayor last week. The last column gives the amount per person per meal allowing three meals a day and without any provision for rent, clothing or fuel. The maintenance allowance is shown in the first column. In the second 40% has been added for rent, fuel, clothing, etc. The table follows:

Man and wife	$12.50	plus 40%	$17.50						9.67 cents per meal
Man, wife and 1 child	15.00	plus 40%	21.00						7.87 cents
Man, wife and 2 children	17.50	plus 40%	24.50						6.75 cents
Man, wife and 3 children	20.00	plus 40%	28.00						6.33 cents
Man, wife and 4 children	22.50	plus 40%	31.50						5.75 cents
Man, wife and 5 children	25.00	plus 40%	35.00						5.50 cents
Man, wife and 6 children	27.50	plus 40%	38.50						5.25 cents
Man, wife and 8 children	32.50	plus 40%	45.50						5.00 cents

Gets Contract for Birthday Present

Miss Frances Rich, daughter of Irene Rich, motion picture star, attended the recent luncheon given by the Assistance League in Hollywood and was pleasantly surprised when presented with an impromptu cake in honor of Miss Rich's eighteenth birthday. And for a birthday present she received a contract to do a feature part in "Zoo in Budapest."

Pretty tricky, eh what? Well, why not, she's Miss Casey at bat — no, we mean at the mike. "Miss California" for 1932, if you please.

FORGIVE AND FORGET

Forgiving without forgetting is a good deal like giving a receipt for money without signing your name to it.

Huge Nugget of Gold Was Used as Anchor for Canoe On Queen Charlotte Coast

Curious Legend of Valuable Rock Which Was Hidden by Chief and Possibly Never Recovered—Expedition Being Planned

The natives of Queen Charlotte Islands have a story of a golden anchor which rivals some of the Greek stories of the days of romance. This anchor was a nugget of gold believed to weigh between forty and fifty pounds and was used by the chief of the Kiseen village to anchor his canoe. It was chosen for that purpose because of its great weight.

Kiseen village is located at the entrance to Moore Channel on the west coast of Moresby Island. At that time there were huge villages all along the west coast of the Queen Charlottes and the different tribes or clans of each village were almost continuously at war with each other.

The last seen of the golden anchor was when the chief who owned it carried it off into the woods to hide it before he went off on one of his raiding expeditions. Someone had told him that the huge nugget was valuable and that the white people would give him many colored blankets for it.

The chief got his war fleet together and left Kiseen early one summer morning for the western entrance to Skidegate Inlet. Just north of Buck Point he was pounced upon by a fleet of war canoes from Chatla village, which was situated near there and a terrible hand-to-hand engagement took place. The Chatla tribe, seeing that they were losing, landed on a small island west of the entrance to Skidegate Inlet. The Kiseen tribe followed and practically exterminated the Chatla fleet. But the chief of the Kiseens was killed in the battle and the secret of the hiding place of the huge nugget went with him.

For years both whites and natives have hunted in vain for the nugget. It is believed by many that it was the famous nugget which was found at Gold Harbor by the Hudson Bay Company when they were reported to have taken a quarter of a million dollars out of one pocket in their mine at that point. The largest nugget reported by the company was valued at $375. Black powder was used to blast the rock and it is claimed that most of the gold was blown into the harbor. After each shot a shower of gold nuggets landed on the ships anchored off shore and there was a scramble for the nuggets both by natives and whites.

It is reported that another expedition is to start soon to search for the lost nugget. If it goes it should excite even greater interest than that to Cocos Island.

LATE GEO. CADWALLADER

Editor, Daily News:

Having read in your paper of Jan. 24th the report of the passing of my son, G. A. Cadwallader, I beg to point an error. George was unmarried and lived with us until he was admitted to the Sanatorium in September, 1929. He leaves to mourn his loss a father, mother, and sister Catherine. He was 27 years of age, had lived in Prince Rupert off and on since 1923, and had made many friends. He had been improving in health until a sudden relapse, on Jan. 2nd, we received a wire which called me to his bedside. I was with him two days before the end came peacefully in his sleep.

George asked to be buried at Kitwanga under the pine trees he loved so much. I brought his remains to Kitwanga where relatives or friends met the train and there we laid him to rest, amid many floral tributes.

I shall be much obliged if you will kindly put this in your paper to correct the error.

ALICE CADWALLADER,
 Cedarvale, B.C. "Mother."

"Maintain this Security

CAN you think of any other investment which has stood by you like your Life Insurance?

In prosperous years, you perhaps did not pay much attention to it. But, in recent times, when other investments have slumped heavily—you know that your Life Insurance has never depreciated a dollar.

Life Insurance has stood by you and your family in the troublesome yesterdays—and it will continue to stand by you and yours in the unknown tomorrows.

Maintain this security of Life Insurance. Make sure of a guaranteed livelihood in later years when your earnings have ceased. Make sure that your wife and children will be safeguarded from want and privation, if you are not here to support them.

Statesmen — bankers — editors — all agree that the family watchword for today should be: "Hold Fast to your Life Insurance".
