He must be full of enthusiasm and must be able to pilot it for a few years at least after victory is won.

Such a person W. J. Bowser is not. He never had a large personal following as did Sir Richard McBride. He was too much of the lawyer of the cool, calculating type. He made a lot of money and built himself a big house on the top of Victoria's most aristocratic neighborhood. Soon after that he was blamed by members of his own party for undermining and dislodging Premier McBride but the electors refused to sanction the deal and the result was political oblivion.

We are told that a new party is to be launched under Mr. Prince George. Bowser's lead but it is noticeable that the men who have been urging Mr. Bowser to come forward to save the country have been men of the Conservative political faith. There has been no clamor from the Liberal side that he save them. It is possible that they are so unregenerate that they cannot be saved or that they do not want to be saved.
