THE BUILDING TRADES

The population of Canada is increasing rapidly but no conference and the world econom provision is being made for this increase either in increased housing accommodation or in those public works which usually keep pace with population increases. The result is the governments of today were that Canada is running behind in her building and, as soon voting their entire efforts in th as the people again acquire sufficient confidence, there is attempt to resuscitate the broke every prospect of a building boom.

Statistics provided through the Royal Bank of Canada show that since statistics have been compiled there has been no time at which the building trades have been so hope of the C. C. F. was to brin slack as they are today. The condition of the industry is about a new economic system with worse than it was in 1915, the previous low point, which out precipitating conflict or serfollowed the boom days of 1912.

The moment building com- things were allowed to drift as they mences again the unemployment slack will be taken up in were now going and unemployment that trade and in the hundreds of other trades dependent upon building for their life.

Men employed in the building trades are mostly skilled tion with disastrous and ruinous change of economic system. If this men who earn good wages. Once they get back to work results. their buying power will return and the general revival of business for which we have looked will be with us again.

So great was the agitation a couple of years ago for re- surplus of the same goods with the duction of wages and general economy in all walks of life that it takes time for people to regain the amount of confidence necessary to encourage them to engage in building programs. With the cutting down of wages and the pruning of expenses has come also the cutting down of rents with the result that the rents paid today are not sufficient to encourage investment in buildings of any kind.

The suggestion coming from Ottawa that Premier Bennett is considering the launching of public works to take care of the unemployed is the most encouraging news heard of late in connection with recovery plans. It is the scheme advocated and promised by T. D. Pattullo in his public addresses. The announcement of such a scheme would have the effect of inspiring confidence and would be the first step toward activity in the building trades.

Turning his attention to what the C. C. F. proposed to do, Mr. Irvine gave his views as to the economic philosophies of the three groups—capitalistic as represented by the Liberals and Conservatives, communistic and C. C. F. The first was conservative and reactionary, the second radical and short-sighted, the third, based on commonsense and natural principles. The speaker told how the C. C. F. had been formed by the joining together of farmer, labor and other groups for the common object of bringing about an orderly change in the economic system. The C. C. F. would
