FEARING BOWSER INFLUENCE

A number of Conservatives who at one time expressed themselves strongly in favor of the Bowser movement are now finding that Mr. Bowser is not as popular as they thought and are being brought forward as independents or independent Conservatives. Victoria has decided to put four independent Conservatives in the field and the morning paper, which always espouses the Conservative cause, is pleading with the people not to put any further Conservatives in the field to oppose them. The non-partisan cry is proving to be a farce and the result is that those who at first declared themselves in favor of the old Conservative war horse are wondering what they shall do now. We suggest that there is plenty of time for them to change their minds several times yet before the election. In the meantime some new leader may be found, the magic of whose name may yet be able to overcome the prejudice of the masses. How about one of the boy orators from the Boys' Parliament?

TRIAL BY POPULAR OPINION

An effort is being made in a number of cases to try legal cases by popular opinion. Just now an effort is being made to influence the case of Tim Buck, the communist who has just had the length of his sentence extended. Whatever may have been the right or wrong of the first conviction, the staging of a demonstration in prison is certainly deserving of an increased sentence.

Judges make mistakes and being human they are also biased, much like other people. No matter what the system, judges will still have to be chosen from the human family, with all their failings. In spite of this the judgment of the average judge is far better than the judgment of the average layman. This is because of the training he gets and the feeling that the country is depending on him to mete out justice. The innocent man would usually rather depend upon the verdict of a judge than that of a jury.

Probably the nearest approach to justice would be trial by a judge. The next best thing would be trial by jury and the worst possible condition would be trial by popular opinion.

Skipper Thomas Renews Acquaintances—Dybhavn Off in "Cloud of Smoke"—Patmore on Holiday Cruise

During the visit of the Canadian Can Co.'s big service boat Cancolim to this port and the Skeena and the Naas Rivers during the past week or so, her skipper, Capt. William Thomas, has been busy renewing old acquaintances and receiving the glad hand from his numerous friends hereabouts. Capt. Thomas was for many years a well known officer of Canadian National Steamships and two or three years ago was in command of the steamer Prince William when that vessel operated out of here to the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Skeena and Naas Rivers. The steamer Prince John was also at one time under his command.

Having on board C. Thomas, managing director of the B. C. Packers, and other officials of the company who are making a tour of northern canning operations, the yacht Florida V., of which the Seymour Navigation Co. of Vancouver is the registered owner, was in port yesterday. The Florida V. is a handsome and elegantly appointed vessel registered from the port of Victoria. She is 55 feet long, 14 feet, five inches beam and six feet, five inches deep. Her gross tonnage is 28 and registered tonnage 16. She is diesel-powered and was built in 1926 at Houghton, Wash.

Making her first call here in two months or more, Northland Transportation Co.'s motorship liner Northland, Capt. Len Williams, arrived in port at 8 o'clock last evening from Ketchikan and, after discharging one carload of Alaskan canned salmon for trans-shipment east over the Canadian National Railways to the United States, sailed at 10 p.m. in continuation of her voyage to Seattle.

Imperial Oil Co.'s small tanker Marvolute, in the course of her duties as supply ship out of the company's local station to the smaller stations at cannery points and elsewhere in the immediate vicinity, was in port this morning loading fuel.

John Dybhavn, president of the Royal Fish Co. and one of the well known "big shots" in the local fishing industry, has well and truly opened his summer home at Lake Kalthyn for the season, even if he did so amid a cloud of smoke and at the expense of spreading no little consternation among his friends and neighbors around the popular interior resort. Mr. Dybhavn, with his family, moved in quietly at the end of last week without said neighbors knowing about it and, in the process of starting to clear out some brush, is reported to have kindled a great fire which poured enormous billows of smoke high into the clear, blue (?) atmosphere at the base of lofty Hudson Bay Mountain. In any case, to make a long story short, nearby neighbors became alarmed and, thinking the place was afire, rang in an alarm and soon the entire Smithers fire department was tearing its way along the highway to the Dybhavn summer place. On arrival it was found that it was merely the well known local fish man on the job and that there was no damage and no cause for alarm—just an innocent enough clearing fire. So, even if there was a little excitement in the countryside for a time, it turned out to be a case of "all's well that ends well" and it at least served to keep the Smithers fire department in trim.

Having spent the week-end in port following a jaunt to the Queen Charlotte Islands during the past three or four weeks, the brothers G. A. and J. W. Kim of Vancouver, who are planning to sail from this coast to Belgium and thence in continuation of a voyage around the world in the yawl Pathfinder, left here on Monday of this week in their tiny craft. As previously announced, they plan to travel down the Pacific Coast to California and cross the western ocean via the South Sea Islands.

BURNHAM IS DEAD

both of family and fortune with the Daily Telegraph.

Joseph Moses Levy, the grandfather, carried on a printing business in Shoe Lane. In 1855 the Daily Telegraph and Courier, was started by a Col. Sleigh. Three months later it was taken over by Joseph Moses Levy in liquidation of a printing debt. Levy put up money for the paper's improvement, cut the title by half and installed his son (afterwards the first Lord Burnham) as editor. The times were exceptionally favorable for newspaper development; the telegraph was just coming to be recognized as a valuable agency in news collecting, and the last of the duties on newsprint were about to be repealed.

In general popularity, if not in political influence, the Daily Telegraph acquired a supreme position in London and held it with little dispute for almost the whole of the second half of the Victorian era.

The Daily Telegraph was perhaps at the height of its popularity and financial success around the time when Hon. Harry Lawson, the subject of this memoir, finished his course through Eton and Balliol. His father was still vigorous. For some years the Hon. Harry made no remarkable impress upon Fleet Street or upon the Telegraph office. He went into Parliament, where he continued as member for a big constituency in the East End of London until he succeeded to his father's peerage. In the House of Commons, however, he made little impression.

Succeeded Father

In 1903 the father was raised to the peerage and chose that moment to retire and hand over the guidance of the Telegraph to his elder son. By this time Fleet Street was changing very much. The easy-going rivalry between the "great dailies" of the old school was being thrust aside for competition of much sterner stuff. To outward appearances, however, the Telegraph sailed on gallantly enough. The Telegraph, indeed, withstood the coming of the new-style half-penny newspaper extremely well, and in particular it never lost its popularity as an advertising medium. In politics the Telegraph continued to steer its old time safe middle course, usually leaning towards the government of the day. As a political or any other kind of propagandist Viscount Burnham never made any attempt to emulate his great rival, Lord Northcliffe. He never indeed displayed any pronounced views upon political matters in detail. His own contribution to the production of the Telegraph seems to have been confined largely to the business side, and the paper continued to display every outward sign of producing large profits for its proprietors. Very suddenly, however, in December, 1927, it was announced that the paper had been sold to Viscount Burnham to Sir William and Sir Gomer Berry who had for some years previously been buying newspaper properties freely both in London and in the great towns elsewhere.

Lord Burnham said goodbye to the office in which his father and grandfather had ruled benignly and made much wealth, and took service with the commission presided over by Sir John Simon to inquire into the governance of India.

The world conference is still struggling to save its face before adjourning. It looks as though we shall have to make our nickles out of silver again pretty soon unless the nickel producers get up a monster petition and present it to the convention.

SPORTS DAY AT PREMIER

Keen Interest Taken in Athletic Celebration at Mining Town Saturday

STEWART, July 19:—On Saturday last the annual summer celebration was held. The weather man was kind and every person in Stewart and Hyder, Alaska, who could possibly find transportation to Premier, went there. The program opened with an afternoon card of sports, mostly for the children. After the supper interval the senior sports were held including such items as drilling contests, mucking competition, etc. The big gymnasium was filled with various booths, games of skill and entertainment which did a roaring trade until the big dance started in the library. This was patronized by over one hundred and ten couples and was a great success. Supper was served in the company's big messroom. Arrangements for the day were in the hands of the Premier Community Club and the success which attended its efforts was a very real one.
