Comedy-Mystery At the Capitol

"The Penguin Pool Murder" Mystery is Clever and Bright With Humor as Well as Mystery

Edna May Oliver, leading lady in "The Penguin Pool Murder" mystery at the Capitol tonight, portrays a tall, angular, outmoded schoolmarm. She dresses like Queen Mary of England and carries a silver-handled large-knobbed black umbrella, rain or shine, fair or cloudy. With Gleason, as a smart-aleck, wise-cracking, know-it-all police inspector, Miss Oliver makes the film a laugh-packed, fast-moving comedy-mystery.

The mystery of "The Penguin Pool Murder" is snappily enacted against a highly original background. Virtually, the mystery of a broker's body discovered in the penguin's tank at the Aquarium is solved by sheer laughs. From the moment Gleason, as Inspector Oscar Piper, enters upon the scene and ejaculates from the corner of his mouth: "Some kid called up and said there was a dead man in swimming with the ducks," the film blossoms forth into keen repartee between Gleason and Miss Oliver, every word of which advances the story breathlessly.

The mystery element follows through to a concluding dramatic courtroom sequence which reveals the guilty person through a canny sprung trap by Edna May Oliver. Suspicion points to everyone. Miss Oliver owns the death weapon, a hat pin, and is herself accused. The aquarium director had threatened the dead man for selling him out in the stock market. The deceased man's wife was quailing under his cruelty. Her lover wanted to eliminate the husband's interference. A pickpocket is found in possession of the murdered man's watch. And all are present at the scene of the crime during its occurrence!
