GOOD OPPORTUNITY

It seems as if there might be a good opportunity just now for some qualified lady to operate a school for primary pupils in the city. There will be over one hundred children between six and seven years of age in the city, the parents of whom were expecting to send them to school in the fall. Many of the parents would be willing to pay a small sum to have them taught, providing arrangements could be made for a suitable room. A person who is fond of young children and who has some teaching ability along kindergarten lines might easily work up a good class in September.

NORTHERN B. C. A UNIT

Northern British Columbia is to some extent a separate unit from Southern B. C. That is one reason why there was a movement at one time for a separate province. It is the reason why an association of the boards of trade of the northern and central portions of the province was formed. Prince Rupert is the natural trading centre for the north and it is likely it will remain so unless overtaken by Prince George or Smithers. At any rate there are many points of contact between all these places.

Spasmodic efforts are made from time to time to induce closer trade relations between Prince Rupert and the interior points. Prince Rupert people would like the farmers to buy in the city but, when it comes to the city people buying the products of the farming and fruit growing portions of the interior, many of the people here are careless. We get asparagus from Terrace, strawberries from Remo and Terrace, beef from Telkwa, milk and cream from many points but, when it comes to articles like potatoes and turnips and cabbages, no organized effort has been made to secure a constant supply or a constant market. To build up this business will be one of the tasks of the future. It must be done if we are all to prosper.

MUSIC WAS DELIGHTFUL

Thursday evening last the music pupils of St. Joseph's Academy delighted their parents and friends with a very pleasing recital. The many numbers were executed with a finish and confidence that spoke highly for the talent and diligence of the performers.

The program was as follows:

"Waltz," (Krogman), Glenna Moore.

"Processional March," (Gill), Nora McCaffery.

"Happy Playmates," (Schelling), Yvonne Riffon.

"The Humming Bee," (Schelling), Yudy Nishikawa.

"Evening Winds," (Schelling), Emily Yamanaka.

"March," (Schelling), Victor Amadio.

"Cuckoo Waltz," (Schelling), Mary Pautak.

"Hungarian Dance," (Engelmann), Thelma Stog.

"Little Boy Blue March," (Engelmann), Leona Whiffin and Marcel Blain.

"Playful Butterflies," (Quinn), Charlotte Balagno.

"The Swallows," (Burgmuller), Marie Amadio.

"Tarantelle," (Heller), Frances Moore.

"Fifth Dance," (Jensen), Adele Mousalleni.

"Valsette in A Flat," (Kirchner), Catherine Baker.

"Pizzicati," (Delibes), Mallie Cameron.

"Alpine Violet," (L. Andre), Ellen and Frances Moore.

"Con Amore," (Beaumont), Genevieve Waugh.

"Danse Negre," (Devaux), June Hankinson.

"Spring Song," (Merkel), Chieu Nishikawa.

"Summer Night," (Binet), Margaret Christensen.

"Valse in C Sharp," (Chopin), Mary Orme.

"Impromptu in A Flat," (Chopin), Venetia Feero.

"The Lark," (Glinka-Balakirev), Marie Balagno.

"Rapsodie Mignonne," (C. Koelling), quartette, Marie Balagno, Mary Orme, Venetia Feero and Margaret Christensen.

"God Save the King."

REV. C. D. CLARKE'S ADDRESS

Editor, Daily News:—

In your issue of yesterday you report that in my address on Sunday night I was "critical of the action of the commissioner in imposing a charge for pupils of sixteen years attending schools." One member of the congregation got the opposite impression and felt that I was defending the commissioner. My address was to the effect that we do not waken up to what is going on in the world until something has taken place in our own community, then we become deeply concerned. Since 1929 our governing bodies have been economizing by curtailing social services and education. In some places hospitals have been closed while in all places hospital services have been cut considerably. Higher education has suffered and the burden placed upon the students by increased fees. Teachers' salaries have been cut to the bone and about the only comment has been: "Well it's just too bad." At the last session of the Legislature the Governor in Council was given authority to raise the age of entering school to seven years. No protest was made but when it appears that our children under seven and over 15 years are to be shut out of school we wake up and become concerned.

What the commissioner proposes is in line with what has been done by the federal and provincial governments. Now that the municipal authority pursues the same line we become horrified. I hold no brief for the commissioner. I do not know him. I do not know whether his appointment was political or otherwise—that is all beside the question. That he has no constructive policy is not to be wondered at. Which of our leaders in Canada has? The commissioner was sent here to see that the city paid interest on bonds, and, not for the welfare of the people. He will prove competent if he can satisfy the bond-holders. Money comes first, the welfare of the people is a second consideration.

That brings us face to face with our economic system which is built on material considerations and not on personal and social welfare. Our present system is wrong. Jesus said, "How much more is a man worth than a sheep?" Man, human personality is of more value than a sheep or a machine or a factory or industry or resources or anything in this world of ours. Jesus placed emphasis upon the value of man and said that all things in the world of ours are here to contribute to the welfare and for the benefit of man. When we become seized of that fact our problems of education, health, etc. will solve themselves. The pity is that it has required the proposed action of the commissioner to make us realize the wrong in our present system.

It is of interest that after years of exposing the evils of our present system and setting forth the teaching of Jesus, the United Church of Canada is organizing for action to build a "personality centered" economic system.

Merrily

They Roll Along

No wonder they're merry—rolling their own with Ogden's Fine Cut. It's so easy to roll a smoother, more satisfying cigarette with this fragrant cigarette tobacco.

... And they're using "Chantecler" papers, of course. Ogden's Fine Cut and "Chantecler"—that, Sir, is the finest combination any man can use for rolling a really better cigarette.

OGDEN'S FINE CUT

Your Pipe Knows Ogden's Cut Plug
