Just before he died, Pahod, who had made a futile dash through the flames, turned to his master and murmured apologetically: "I am very sorry, sir, I was unable to find them. I did the best I could, sir."

CANADIAN CREW BEAT BELGIANS AT HENLEY

Outrowed Them in Semi-final for the Grand Challenge Cup—Will now have to Meet the Magdalen Crew in the Final—Outlook is Good for Victory

(Canadian Press Despatch)
Henley-on-Thames, July 7.—There is every prospect that the Ottawa heat may carry off the Grand Challenge Cup this year, though in meeting the Magdalen College eight in the final tomorrow, they will have to meet the acknowledged favorites.
Beat the Belgians
Today the Ottawa eight men and vanquished the Belgians in the semi-final for the trophy, winning in grand style. Both crews got off together well, and it was a neck and neck race for half a mile, with both crews pulling a strong stroke. After going half a mile, the Canadians crawled up in front of their rivals, and from there to the end, their superiority was evident.

Outrowed Them
The Belgians were well beaten, being outrowed completely by the Ottawa men, who finished in good condition. There is great interest in the final, in which the Ottawas meet the Magdalen College eight. The latter are a strong crew, and the betting is principally in their favor.

today in Prince Rupert. Using an incubator by a little careful attention Mr. Warner is able to make his poultry farming a profitable venture. Care and knowledge as well as patience are necessary, but the result is worth the trouble.
Just to show what Porcher Island can do "on its own" without any cultivation, Mr. Warner brought over specimens of the trailing pea-vine with its pretty purple flowers, which grows wild to a height of about four feet over at Goose Bay. A bunch of many colored wild flowers as luxuriant, though different from those of English meadows, was another pleasing part of the Porcher Island consignment, and in addition Mr. Warner brought a couple of samples of Timothy grass and hay of excellent length and quality. He has about fifteen acres of this ready for cutting on his ranch at present.

PEERS' WIVES WANT NO RIVALS
Do Not Wish to See Five Hundred Liberal Peers Created—New Force in Politics.
London, July 6.—It is reported that the wives of the British peers are trying hard to induce their husbands to vote for the British Parliament bill, because they dread the imminent creation of several hundred new peers, with whose wives they would then have to associate. The loss of the veto power is less terrible to these ladies than the idea of recognizing the "wives of common tradesmen" as their equals in social rank.
