BUYING IS INCREASED

Ahead of Last Year

It is generally conceded among business people of Prince Rupert that Christmas trade this year here showed a marked increase over last year. Many merchants report that, despite lower commodity prices, profits were increased owing to much larger turnover Well before Christmas Eve seasonal stocks were beginning to show signs of depletion and, in certain lines, complete exhaustion, indicating that trade was larger than the merchants had estimated it would be.

Bank managers, usually conservative in such matters, admit that there was a general increase in Christmas trade this year, one estimating that it was possibly seventeen percent ahead of last year while another remarked that hundreds, if not thousands, of dollars more were spent in Christmas buying this year than last.

The protracted cold snap also resulted in increased buying of ertain lines of clothing while fuel dealers also had greater trade.
