Pattullo Is Complimented

Makes Best Speech In His Career According to His Friends and Opponents

The following comment on the recent speech of T. D. Pattullo, member for Prince Rupert, appeared in the Victoria Times:

"Something important was happening in the House Thursday something that went far below the surface into the very bowels of politics, something that made members think what strange things might come out of this session. On the surface, of course Mr. Pattullo was making a speech, unquestionably the best he has ever delivered, a speech which forced reluctant Conservatives to pound their desks and rendered Liberals quite inarticulate with delight.

"But underneath, what was Mr. Pattullo getting at? That was what worried the average member, and many a statesman, pacing the corridor afterwards, asked his neighbor this question: Had Mr. Pattullo re-opened the door to union government, or had he slammed it shut forever? No one seemed to know. Some said the door was shut. Others were just as sure it was open. But everyone agreed that Mr. Pattullo's position had been greatly strengthened by his speech, by his note of confidence, his demand that we be up and doing instead of waiting for something to happen.

* * * * *

"Just what Mr. Pattullo meant to convey to the back-benchers I cannot tell you, or whether he really intended to convey more than he said. What he said, in a word, was that there could be no union government built on the government's policy of stagnation, of cutting out unemployment relief, of wrecking all public services in order to pay the money lenders a hundred cents on the dollar. But Conservatives like Mr. Bruhn, who wanted to co-operate with him, really wanted to, then it was their duty to step across the floor and join him.

* * * * *

Invitation

"Apparently Mr. Pattullo would not refuse their help. And most significantly, evidently for the benefit of all Conservatives who may be willing to listen, he read word for word the instructions of the Liberal convention, giving him power to act as he pleased, to surround himself with men of any group who could help him. It looked surprisingly like an invitation. And you are fooling yourself if you imagine no Conservatives share the general economic beliefs of Mr. Pattullo.

* * * * *

"Whatever happened, Mr. Patullo wanted something to happen soon. That was the keynote of his speech—action immediately. There was a new fire in his eye and a new ring to his voice as he looked down the Conservative benches and demanded that they, the long-suffering private members, take the situation into their own hands and wring from the Prime Minister a statement of his plans and policies, which no one knew. Did the members think that if he were in office with a three-to-one majority, he would be doing nothing, would be coaxing the opposition to join him with one hand and bludgeoning it with the other? It was a deep thrust and it went home. You could tell by the reaction of the Conservative members that Mr. Pattullo's speech, for good or ill, would certainly provoke some development in the strange chaos of British Columbia politics.

* * *

"Altogether, whether one agreed with his views or not, Mr. Pattullo was at his best. He has never been so good before, so forceful, so bold and so clear. A leading Conservative sent a not to Mr. Pattullo say- it was the best speech he ever made, and his was the judgment of the House."
