LOCAL HALIBUT BOAT LOST BUT CREW OF FOUR ESCAPE

Halibut Vessel Helga H. Lost in Storm; Crew Leave Her in Boats

Men Spent Three Days on Shore and Then Made Their Way to Kitkatla and Were Brought to City by Native

The four-man halibut boat Helga II. was abandoned by her captain and crew in a storm several days ago and the men spent three days on the west coast of Banks Island before reaching Kitkatla in their dory. From there they were brought to the city by a native, Ambrose Brown, in his gas boat Union P.

The Helga H. developed enginer the gale. The men took to the dory the gale. The men took to the dory the schooner they do not know. She is probably ashore and possibly broken up. The men who escaped were Capt. M. Holkestad, H. Holkestad, Sig Hansen and T. Johannessen.

The boat was well insured. She had aboard 2,000 pounds of halibut when abandoned.

Men Brought Here Last Evening And Remanded For Eight Days By Magistrate

CHARGED

Five of the strikers at Anyox were brought to the city last evening by the provincial police on board the fisheries protection cruiser Malaspina and placed in the city lock-up. Later they were brought before Magistrate Mc-Clymont and charged with unlawful assembly and remanded for eight days.

Keneth Montgomery, Giovanni Senvido, Angus McIvor and Matt Jurgevich.

Twelve constables came in on the Malaspina returning to their locations in the interior and this morning 25 police constables in charge of Corporal Barwis are here on the Prince Rupert on their way to Anyox to replace men who had been drafted there from various northern points.

The police report everything very quiet at Anyox.
