ANNIE BESANT

The death this week of Annie Besant, the world's most active and most versatile woman, draws attention to her and her work throughout the world. Thousands of columns of newspaper articles will be written about her this week and most of them will be appreciative.

No one suspected when the young girl, Annie Wood, married the vicar of Sibsey that the bride would become a world figure. Everything was against it with the exception of her parentage, which was English on one side and Irish on the other. Apparently she set out to undertake the duties of motherhood and parson's wife with excellent intentions, but there was something stirring within her that rebelled against it. She disagreed with her husband and the tenets that he preached and, going to the opposite extreme, joined the society of free-thinkers, allied herself with Bradlaugh in his crusade against all established forms of religion and became for the time being the most notorious woman in England.

That was simply a phase of her development. While she abjured the established Christian religion she soon began to be interested in Christian work such as children's aid. In India she took up the cause of education and when the college which she founded in Benares was absorbed by the Hindu University she was honored by being given the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

Annie Besant advocated dominion status for India, quarrelled with Gandhi, studied Hindu philosophy and finally became a Theosophist. She took two young boys under her care and educated and trained the elder to become the vehicle for the reincarnation of the new Messiah and named him Krishnamurti. Failure seemed to have followed this effort for Krishnumurti not many years ago stated that he did not agree with his adopted mother's views.

There never will be and never could be another woman like Annie Besant. The world would not want many. She stirred up the slumbering mental activities of millions of people through her lectures, her writings, her espousal of unpopular causes and through her magnetic personality. She was a tireless worker, ate no meat, drank no alcoholic drinks, did not use tobacco in any form but otherwise was quite human and was up to the minute in adaptation of the newest inventions and contrivances. In her later years she used the airplane to enable her to keep speaking engagements. When she spoke, thousands flocked to hear her.

If the doctrine of reincarnation which Madame Besant believed, is true, we may look for her return to the earth before many years for her soul is much too active to remain quiescent long. At any rate many of the chords which she struck here will go on resounding until the end of all time.

MR. PATTULLO AND THE NEW ROAD

Editor, Daily News:—

At the Liberal meeting the other night, the main criticism levelled at Mr. Pattullo, as shown by the questions asked, was that the Liberals and Conservatives had not done enough towards the building of the new road out of Prince Rupert, and the Socialists wanted a chance to show what they can do. I suppose if the Socialist candidate were to be elected he would take the other forty-six members of the House by the throat and force them to give him as much money as he wanted for this road.

These critics forget that wherever Mr. Pattullo goes he has to meet the criticism that he has spent altogether too much of the people's money on his riding. Wherever the opponents of the Liberals discuss alleged Liberal wastefulness and extravagance they always refer to the Court House built here by Mr. Pattullo. Moreover, as Mr. Nickerson, the chairman, pointed out at the meeting, Prince Rupert has received more money per capita for its roads and public buildings together than any other place of its size in the province.

This should be sufficient answer, but it will not satisfy those believers in pork barrel politics who measure a member's worth to his country solely by the amount of money he secures for his constituency. They choose to ignore the fact that a man in Pattullo's public position has to answer at the bar of provincial public opinion as well as to his own constituents.

Even at that, Mr. Pattullo believes the province would be best served at the present time by putting the unemployed of the north at work building this road. He has a definite policy of work and wages for them and certainly will be in a position at last where he can carry out his own policy; something which cannot be said for our Socialist candidate if elected.

The people of Prince Rupert also should not forget that even from the standard of pork barrel politics the Liberals have done their duty by this city. The charge has been frequently and truthfully levelled against us that Prince Rupert has had more government money spent on it; that it has been more pap fed, than any other place of its size in the Dominion of Canada. If it is any great credit to them, it can also be truthfully said that the Liberal members from this city and district have secured more than three-quarters of this expenditure.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space,

OLD TIMER.
