TWO FILMS BOTH GOOD

Western Thriller and Mystery Comedy Being Shown at Capitol This Wee-End

"Sunset Pass" a fast-moving Zane Grey story starring Randolph Scott, Tom Keene, Kathleen Burke, Harry Carey and Kent Taylor, and "The Crooked Circle," a lively comedy mystery with Ben Lyon, Zasu Pitts, James Gleason and Irene Purcell in the leading roles, are the principal features of a double bill picture program being presented this week-end at the Capitol Theatre here.

"Sunset Pass" is the story of a gentlemen's association deputy who discovers that the men he is supposed to track down and apprehend is the brother of the girl he loves. The film, which follows the original story closely, is replete with thrilling incidents including a raging prairie fire, a mad stampede of an enormous herd of cattle and plenty of hard riding and breathless gun fighting.

The story of "The Crooked Circle" deals with the conflict of a club of amateur criminologists when they cross an organization of crooks. The crooks take possession of a haunted house and many weird events take place, all the apparently supernatural doings eventually turning out to have perfectly natural origin. It is an elaborately mounted picture.

Mrs. James Denholme, who recently underwent a major operation in the Prince Rupert General Hospital, sails tonight by the ss. Prince John on her return to her home at Tiell, Queen Charlotte Islands.

Individualism in the economic field must give way to co-operation. Conscious or not we must be the instruments to bring about a new social order. Liberal democracy has a duty, namely, to re-educate itself to cope with the new historical hour, or perish.

LOCAL MAN VISITS EAST

time of his first visit the town had from 2,500 to 3,000 inhabitants. The father of the present Mayo Brothers was a good country doctor. His sons worked hard and obtained good results and soon attracted attention. Their offices were downtown over some stores. Then they built a quarter of a million dollar clinic and in ten years had outgrown it and a three million dollar building was erected. Large hotels also went up in the city.

In telling of the visit to the World's Fair at Chicago, Dr. Kergin described the big tiresome crowd and the buildings which were almost ugly by daylight although rather startling at night. The cost of getting the grounds under way was said to be $30,000,000 and it was carried out by private initiative without help from the city or state. It was expected that, by the time it closed, it would have paid its way. The city had benefitted temporarily not only through the ordinary visitors but through the numerous conventions held there.

One of the exhibits that interested Dr. Kergin was the "Man from Germany" in the science exhibit. This was an effort to educate the public in regard to itself by building a man, covering it with a transparent skin and illuminating the interior so that the details of the anatomy might be studied. The whole of the science exhibit was intensely interesting and a great deal of time could have been spent there had it not been for the crowds.

At Cleveland the doctor attended a convention of 5,000 members of his profession but, just at that time, one of the big football matches was being played and he found that their convention was wholly eclipsed by the interest taken in the football players. It was a lesson in humility.

ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION

Editor, Daily News:—

We have natural resources and abundant labor, capital, machines, agricultural fields all inoperative for lack of markets, for lack of purchasing power. We are face to face with a vicious circle common to the rest of the world. All we lack is a co-ordinating power to set the parts in motion.

Thanks to the wisdom and foresightedness of true democratic minds whose vision has been fruitful in providing for the establishment of an industrial council, after so many years of gloom and groping in the dark, we at last breathe an atmosphere of action.

Man has not exhausted his organizing capacity. After having created these wonderful plants, shops, mines, mills, etc., which are today only partially operated, and this for exclusively selfish motives, with utter disregard to social welfare, is it impossible for man's organizing capacity and administrative power to operate them for social needs?

Man must first of all have the courage to face his conscience and overcome his hypocrisy and greed. Industrial feudalism must cease in order to save society. Wealth is a social product like the cultural heritage. Society must organize industry on a basis of social function. In other words industry must be operated on behalf of national welfare, though allowing a legitimate remuneration to capital.

It is inconceivable that the present state of affairs should last any longer. Some one may think that, after electing a new government, there remains nothing else to be done. Let no one deceive himself. We are turning one of the corners of history and only the mobilization of the best there is in the nation can overcome this oppressive situation. There is a whole education to be made on the new principles of ruling modern society. Rugged in-
