PRAY FOR THE WORKERS

Recently in church the parson prayed for the workers. He should not have done so. They do not need prayers. It is the men who are idle or who have no work they can do with profit who are in need of prayers.

The man who works and who likes his work is happy. He also usually has health of mind and body. It is the man who loafs and complains who is to be pitied and prayed for. The parson should pray the Good Lord to give him the desire to work, the ability to do it and the work to do.

Let us forget the workers and centre our thoughts on the men who can't or won't work. Each group is equally out of luck.

INTERNATIONAL FIGURE

It would not be a bad idea for the League of Nations to appoint Ramsay MacDonald general manager of the organization for the rest of his life. His strong feature is his grasp of international affairs and his ability to deal with the people of all nations. When others fail he comes into the field and succeeds.

It is to be hoped that his latest move to prevent trouble in Europe will be successful. The last thing needed today is a war.

WAS OVER ASSESSED

After, Daily News:
In your issue of the 16th you stated that the assessment on the Capitol Theatre building was reduced by $7,000.00 from $76,000.00 to $69,000.00, it having been decided that the seats were not assessable as real property as they might easily be removed by the tenant.
This statement is absolutely incorrect, the reduction in assessment was simply given because the building was overassessed.
Yours very truly,

TELLS ABOUT THE BALKANS

William Stormont Told Rotary Club of His Experiences Outside of Actual War

One of the outstanding addresses of an informal character was given at the luncheon of the Prince Rupert Rotary Club yesterday by William Stormont of the British Army. Toward the close of the war he was in the Balkans and at present is in charge of the lubricant oil department of the Imperial Oil Company at Vancouver.

Mr. Stormont told of the picturesque people he met, of the coming of peace, of a visit to Bucharest and finally of a visit paid surreptitiously to the Sultan of Turkey and a personal interview with the head of the Ottoman Empire.

The speaker was during the few months of the war which culminated in the coming of peace, inspector of armaments and his duty was to keep the guns in good condition particularly the sights. He left Southampton on May 8, 1918 and the ship enroute cut through the German submarine U-93 sinking that vessel without damaging the transport.

A crossing of the Adriatic was made and Mr. Stormont described the intensely green foliage of the country, mostly olive and other similar fruit trees with white houses set here and there.

Salonika
Arriving at Salonika, the place looked very beautiful set in magnolia and olive and other trees. People were there of almost all nationalities, Turks, Serbs and people of varied habits and customs. Roumanian and Bulgarian officers were very bright, picturesque uniforms. The Turks wore shoes with tassels on the ends of their toes and the fez or turban on the head. So hot was it that no work was done during the noon two-hour siesta. The great wish was for cool, clean air. More discomfort was experienced than in the cold, dry climate of the north.

The speaker mentioned seeing the car bearing a peace envoy several weeks before the end of the war which was received at that headquarters and they were then told that the war was over and rejoiced greatly.

During the period following the war the time was spent largely in hunting and seeing the country. Incidents illustrating the customs were related. One was that of three brightly uniformed officers travelling on fine horses and three wives following behind on foot. When crossing a stream not one of the men looked back to see if the women had crossed safely.

During the period after the war the British ruled the country and so just was their administration that a memorial was sent to Versailles asking that they may be continued there. This of course was ignored.

The visit to Bucharest was a memorable one and an evening spent at the Cafe-Maxime was interestingly described.

The visit to the palace at Constantinople and the attendance at a reception to which they were invited although out of bounds to army officers proved one of the outstanding incidents of a very pleasing and enjoyable address.

SPORT CHAT

Every boxer of any note has one or two favorite tricks in his bag, which he feels are just the things he needs to give him an edge over his opponent. And the very fact that he thinks he has an advantage is in itself a point in his favor. However, most of these tricks are of no use to any other boxer for the simple reason that another might not be able to make use of it, through either physical or mental differences.

There is one thing, however, included in the basic principles of scientific boxing, which every fighter should study and use. This is the art of "tying-up."

Tommy Loughran, one of the cleverest boxers in ring history, was an adept at tying-up. Boxers, under the rules, are not permitted to hold their opponents' arms in such a manner that the opponent cannot free that arm at will. Loughran's trick was to catch his opponent's arm, just above the elbow, between his own extended thumb and forefinger. This very effectually prevented punching in close for the few seconds necessary, and at the same time was well within the rules for the opponent could free his arm merely by raising it higher. It was not "holding" but it was trying-up.

Cars Collide McBride St.

The cars of Sterling Food Co. and Ald. F. Wesch collided at the junction of Eighth and McBride last night at 7:30. The car driven by Paul Johnston was coming along Eighth Avenue travelling east and Ald. Wesch was coming along McBride Street from Eleventh Avenue. Wesch's car hit the back of the Sterling car banging it up against the curb and sidewalk causing considerable damage to the under carriage and breaking the windows. Both drivers escaped serious injuries. Ald. Wesch's car is in the garage for minor repairs.
