

MAY ROBERTS TELLS EXPERIENCE

when a very young girl. Oh, it would fill a big volume to tell you of all the incidents of my career since then and of the parts I have played.

"My first two years and a half on the stage were devoted to musical comedy. Then the late Sam Roberts, an actor of considerable renown, persuaded me to enter the dramatic field in Chicago. I did so with the result that I soon had star parts in some of the best companies playing the leading theatres between New York and San Francisco.

A Player's Romance

After my marriage with Mr. Victor Gallard in Chicago I got my own stock company and my own company I have had ever since. There is not a city or town between Old Mexico and the Arctic Circle on one side and the two seaboard on the other but that has had an opportunity to see my company."

Takes Real Work

"How many plays have you in your repertoire?" interjected the interviewer.

"Forty-four."

"How do you manage to remember them all?"

"Hard work and nothing else. Frequently we prepare a play in one day and we have never yet fallen down in a performance. I love the art of my work and I know I can say the same for the rest of my company."

"What about your experiences? I suppose you get all sorts of queries from stage struck young men and girls?"

"Why of course I do. Since I have been here I have had several letters asking me about the stage, invitations to dinner, congratulations on my work, etc."

Two Kinds of People

"And the people here, what do you think of them?"

"They're just dears! I think there is far more culture shown by the audiences in this city than in many of the so-called first cities of the continent.

"There isn't anyone in the world I dislike—but, wait, yes there is, and I would like to smack his or her face."

"Who can that be?" hastily asked the News.

"The hypercritical critic who has never seen a first class play by a first class company and then dares to criticize every play and player."

Hardships and Joys

Then the interviewer got a glimpse into the hard side of life to an actress who is on the road with a stock company. He was told what it feels like to play occasionally in an almost empty house in the face of a big salary roll, a company with a weighty bill of expense; of jumping from one town to another in and uncomfortable train or boat, of being forced to take the attic apartments in a primitive hotel and of the hardest blow of all—to give out the best work possible and then have a cold, unresponsive audience.

"There are a hundred and one hardships incidental to the life of an actress or actor but there are also a thousand and one sweets. Real friends are met in every town that go to compensate for all the things that sometimes spell tears. It is a fascinating life that demands brains and lots of them," asserted the lady.

A Lucky Traveller

Fate has been good to Miss Roberts she says. She has never been in a railroad accident and she has beaten the celebrated Casey Jones for railroad travelling because she has travelled on the Union Pacific and the Santa Fe and also the Canadian Pacific and the G. T. P.—Casey never heard of the last two, he claimed.

Fate, however, handed Miss Roberts a bad deal eleven years ago. It was Christmas night, 1900 in St. Joseph, Mo., when the theatre she was playing in was gutted by fire and her wardrobe valued at several hundreds of dollars was hopelessly cremated.

A Faithful Companion

"Before you go," said the interesting leading lady, "let me introduce Becky Sharp." Becky is a tiny German tan dog, which Miss Roberts brought from Germany six years ago. Becky has been smuggled through a score of ports by cryptic means and told her mistress in dog language "whither thou goest I shall go," and Miss Roberts told Becky it had always been so and would continue thusly until the day breaks, etc.

AT THE THEATRE

Strong Performance of the Romantic Drama "The Adventuress."

Again last night the May Roberts Company charmed a large audience by their art. The play selected was the romantic drama "The Adventuress," in which Miss Roberts scored a triumph as the fascinating but dangerous Marquise Stephanie, the adventuress.

The play deals with the work of the secret police in Rome of one hundred years ago and gave scope for a display of some of the gorgeous Parisian gowns for which Miss Robert's wardrobe is famous. The entire cast was a strong one, the play being more strongly presented than any of the former ones. As the dashing young English nobleman, Sir Horace Welby, who brought the schemes of the adventuress to nought, Mr. Gillard had a romantic role which suited him excellently. As usual Mr. Ira Robertson gave a finished performance in the character parts, this time as Barrato the police agent. George Zecco as Prince Malcotti, the adventuress' accomplice, Miss St. John as pretty Alice Varney, and Leonard Garey as Alfonso the servant gave excellent support.

"The Judge and the Girl," a modern comedy, will be staged for tonight.

What will be pleasing news to those who have invested in Houston townsite lots, and to those who propose investing in such good proposition is that the contract for the right of way for the G. T. Lots in Houston, which is in the rich Bulkley Valley are selling like hot cakes in Vancouver, where Law-Butler have an office. Some important sales have been made at the local office on Third avenue.
