EUROPE AIR TENSE FOLLOWING DOUBLE ASSASSINATION

Slaying of Alexander And Barthou Cause of Widespread Sensation

No Serious Political Repercussions up to Last Night—Eleven Year Old Prince Peter Proclaimed King—Killer of Monarch and Minister Himself Dead

DEATH LIST TOTALS FIVE

MARSEILLES, France, Oct. 10: (CP)—The death toll from the assassination of King Alexander reached five today when Madame Dubrec, widowed spectator, died as a result of wounds from flying bullets, fifteen, in all, having been wounded. The condition of General Alfonse Georges of the French Superior War Council, is good and he is expected to recover.

PARIS, Oct. 10: (CP)—There were no political repercussions of consequence in Europe up to last night following the double assassination in Marseilles yesterday of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, the most sensational incident of its kind since the slaying at Sarajevo, Serbia, in 1914 of Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria, the spark which kindled the Great War.

King Alexander

Slain Jugo-Slav Monarch

Some political observers do not believe the circumstances of yesterday's unfortunate incident to have been of such a nature to lead to serious international complications although civil strife may ensue in Jugo-Slavia. It is pointed out that, after all, the dead king, the object of many previous assassination attempts in his own country, was the victim of his own countryman. Barthou's slaying was, undoubtedly, not the prime intention of the assassin, a young Jugo-Slav terrorist, but was incidental to the planned killing of the king.

What effect the slaying of Barthou would have on international relations in Europe appeared to be uncertain last night. Barthou, 72 years old and a prominent French statesman, became foreign minister after the Stavisky scandal. He had been a zealous worker for goodwill between France and the nations of the Little Entente, had been instrumental in improving relations between Italy and Jugo-Slavia and is credited with having had a good deal to do with the recent acceptance of Soviet Russia into the League of Nations.

The French government yesterday officially declared one month of national mourning.

Assassin Is Dead

MARSEILLES, France, Oct. 10:—The assassin of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Foreign Minister Barthou of France, two hours after the murderous attack, was dead himself as a result of wounds inflicted by mounted guards and police after he had worked his way through bodyguards to mount to the running board of the car in which King Alexander and Barthou were riding past the Stock Exchange in a procession and pump bullets point blank into the body of the king and the arm and leg of Barthou.

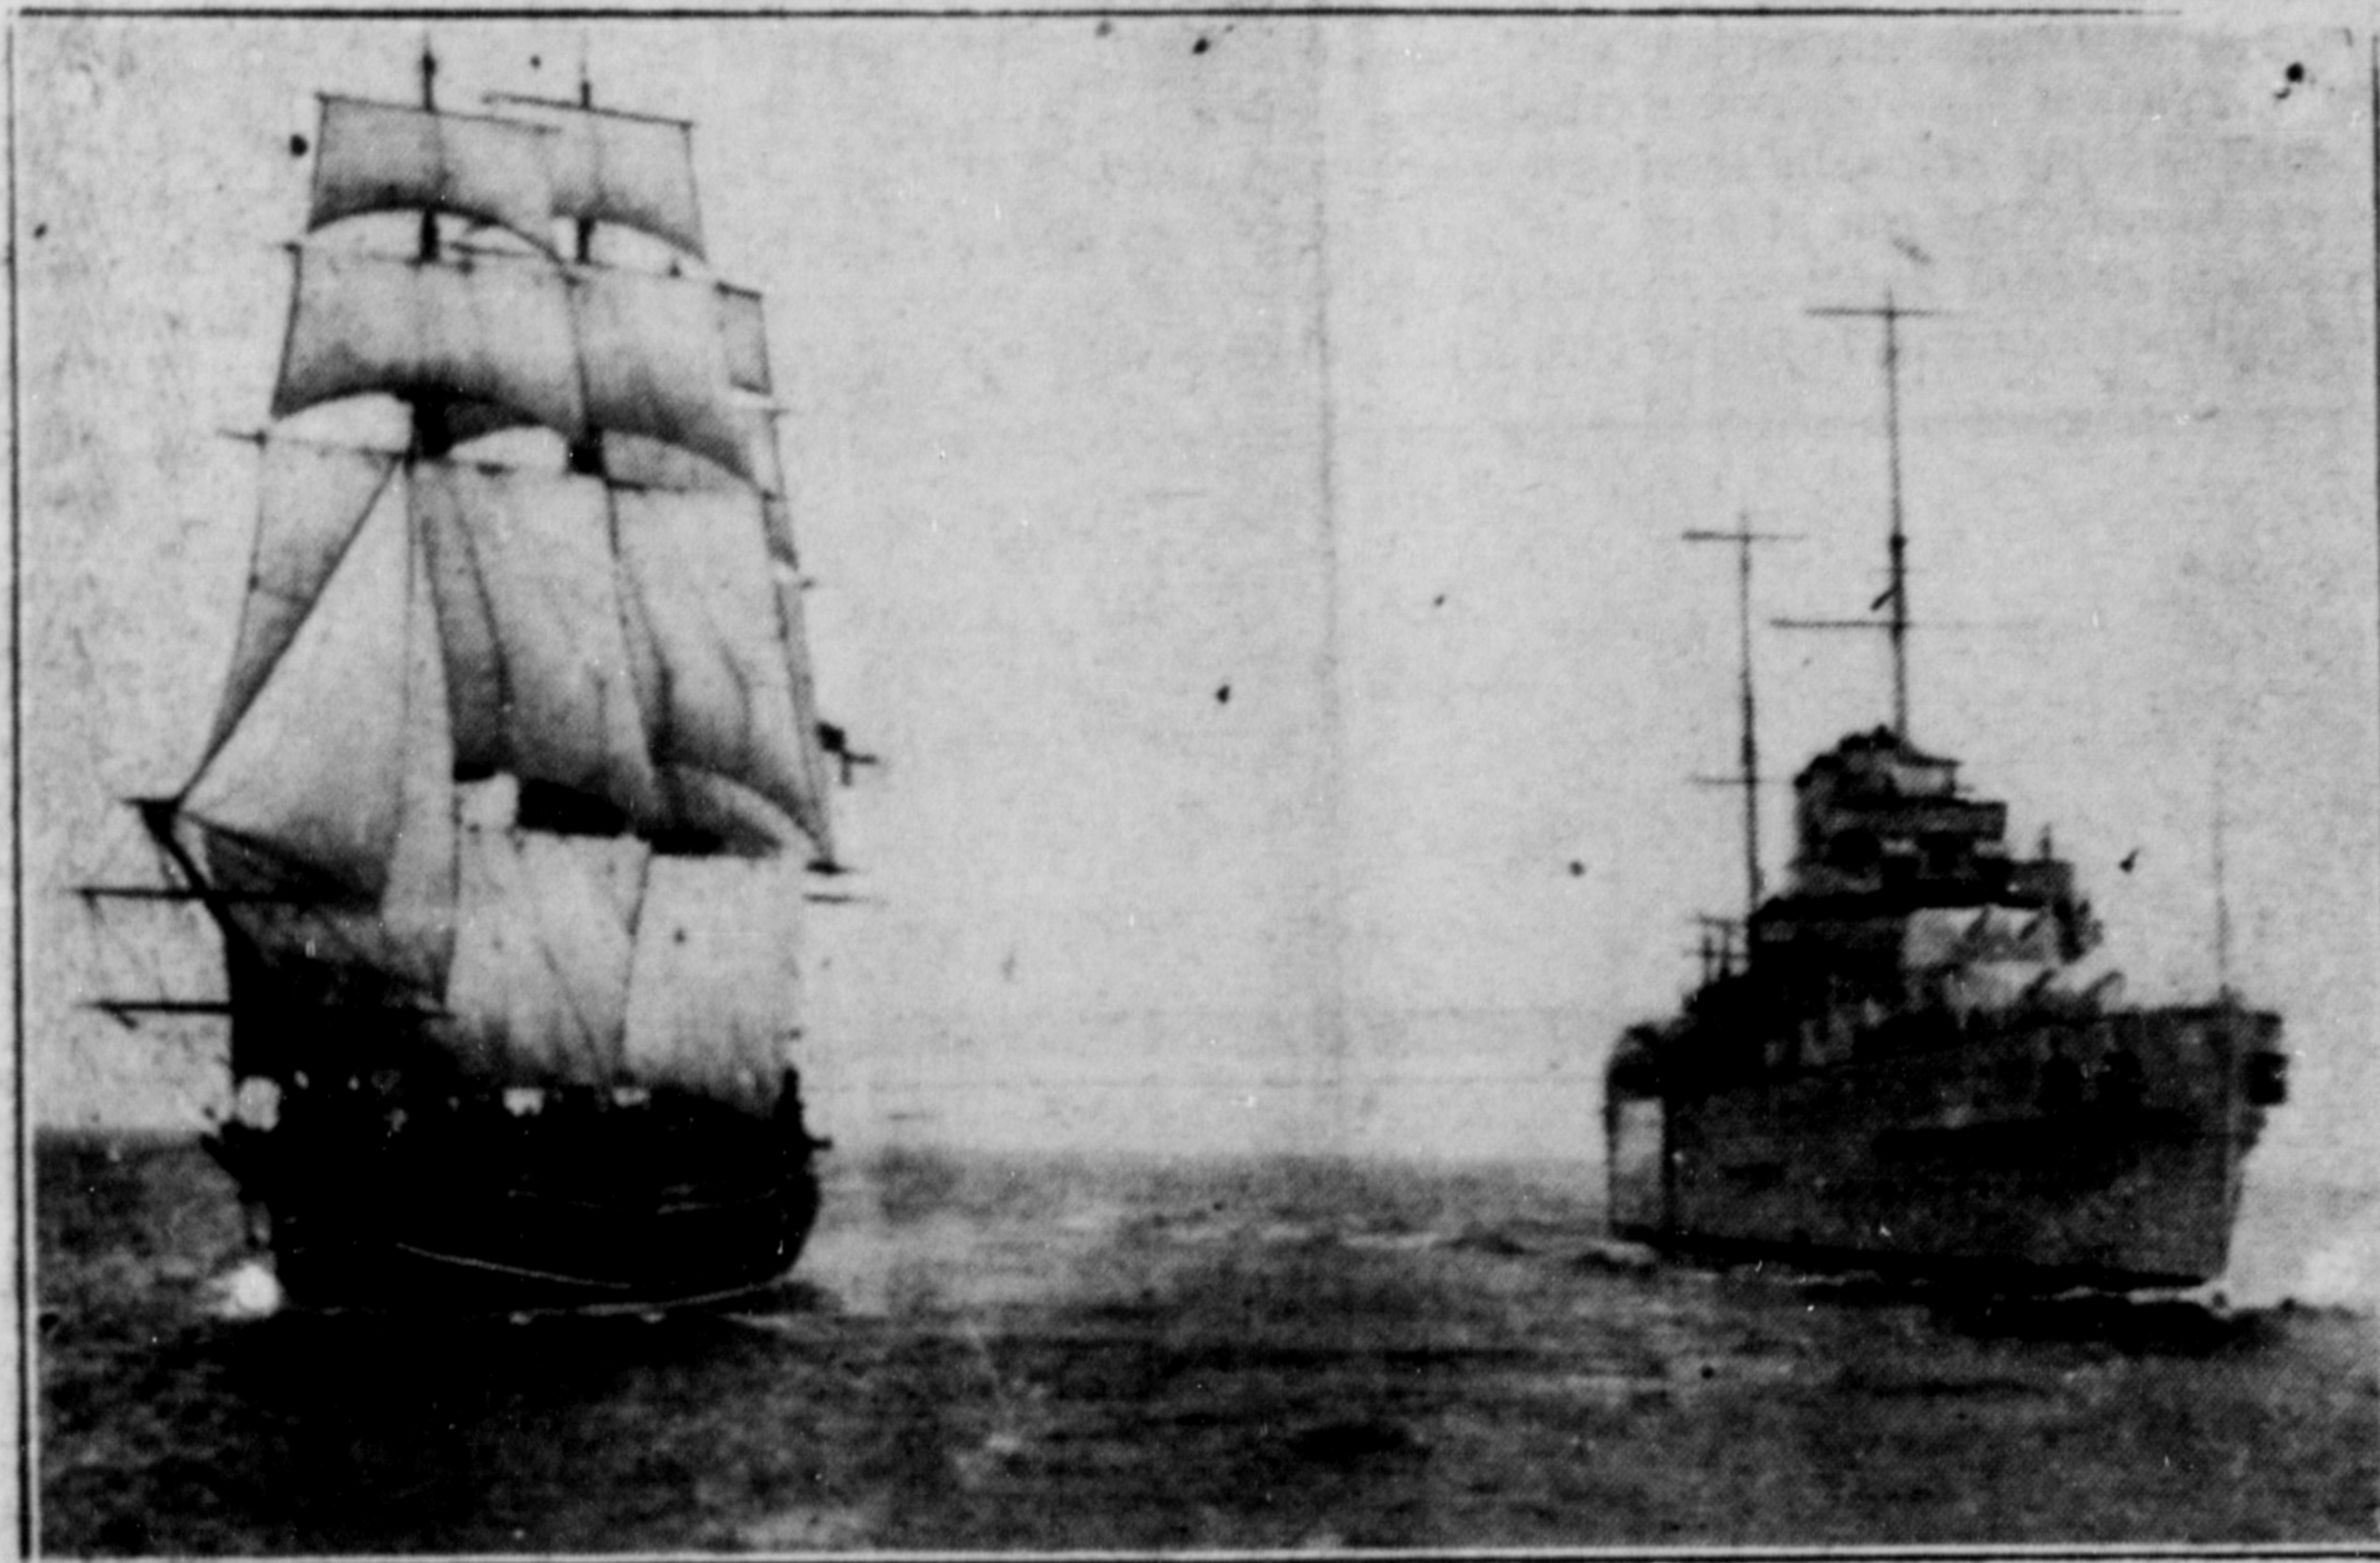

King Alexander was shot through the liver, left shoulder and left lung. Loss of blood from the arm and leg injuries was the cause of death of Barthou who expired two hours after being shot.

The murderer was Petroff Kallinin, a 35-year old Jugo-Slav terrorist, who entered France on September 28, apparently intent upon assassination of the king even at that time. He was a merchant from Zagreb.

After he had fired upon King Alexander, Kallinin was felled to the ground.
