"Dry Southeaster" Stirred Things Up — Halibut Fishing to Start March 1—Control of Operations Planned

Sunday night's wild "dry southeaster" caused possibly less damage along the waterfront than might have been anticipated, the major casualty being the breaking of the back of the Northern British Columbia Airways' hangar which broke loose from its moorings and became caught on the steep bank as a result of which the damage occurred. The structure has since been moved from the foot of McBride Street to beyond the ocean dock. A couple of small boats were sunk at Cow Bay floats but were pulled up the next day. Other damage included the partial blowing down of Philpott & Evitt's coal shed which is being speedily repaired. About a hundred feet of railing was blown down on the Canadian National wharfular ramp leading to the docks and a few shingles were ripped off the big shed. Due to general watchfulness and all night vigils in many cases, the many boats of the various fleets held steady and there was little other damage of consequence. However, it was a trying enough night and no one wants another like it for a while. If it had been a westerly instead of a southeaster that kicked up such a fuss, consequences would, undoubtedly, have been much more serious.

With Capt. S. K. Gray back in command after having taken his annual vacation ashore, C. P. R. steamer Princess Adelaide arrived in port at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the south and sailed at 10 o'clock last night on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

The Indian Department's power cruiser Naskeena, with Indian Agent W. E. Collison and Dominion Constable A. J. Watkinson on board, returned to port last evening from a trip to Port Simpson, having left here early Thursday morning for the native village. Mr. Collison made the trip for the purpose of conducting the annual election of the village council at Simpson.

Halibut fishing activities of the 1934 season will get under way by general agreement of the various interests concerned on March 1, it is now expected. That means that little more than six weeks must elapse before work is resumed and meantime there is considerable to be done in the way of preparations. The waterfront is still quiet today but things before very long now will, doubtless, be beginning to show considerable stir. Meantime, pending the opening of the new season, fishermen and vessel owners of both the Canadian and American fleets continue to work on plans for voluntary control of operations both in the interests of improved market conditions and the conservation of the fishery. The most important agreement that has been so far reached in this end is that providing for the extension of the lay-over period between trips as has already been announced. It is also expected that a new treaty governing the halibut fisheries of the North Pacific will be negotiated between the United States and Canada, giving the International Fisheries Commission further powers in connection with the regulation of the fishery, but whether it will be possible to make such a treaty effective prior to the opening of the 1934 season appears to be doubtful.

John Dybhavn, head of the Royal Fish Co., is expected home next week from a trip east. He attended the annual meeting of the Biological Board of Canada in Ottawa and visited Montreal, New York and other eastern cities on company business.

In spite of having called at Kitimaat on the way north, Union steamer Cardena, Capt. Ernest Georgeson, arrived in port at 8:30 last evening from the south and sailed at midnight on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

Northland Transportation Co.'s freighter Northholm arrived in port yesterday from the south to load a large parcel of elevator screenings from the Alberta Wheat Pool's local elevator for delivery to Seattle.
