Daytona Beach in February—wind brakes. They may or may not work, and if they don't the results are likely to be disastrous, but the famous speed king believes windbrakes will help him break his record of 272 miles per hour because he will be allowed a longer run at top speed. He hopes to surpass the 300 m.p.h. mark. Sir Malcolm, according to Thomas H. Wisdom of the Sporting Life, plans to risk his life in proving that the brakes of the modern racing car are all wrong. Wind brakes are being fitted to the;

new Blue Bird now rapidly approaching completion in a secret workshop at Brooklands track.

The car has been fitted with a number of sliding fins in each side of the body at the rear. When he flashes over the measured mile at Daytona, to assist in stopping the car he will pull a lever that will slide the fins out into the air and wind pressure will aid in bringing the car to a stop. That is, if they work out as the designers expect. Ordinary brakes, as fitted to the average car, if applied at even 200 miles an hour, just melt in their drums, so terrific is the heat generated by the spinning wheels. This fact has robbed Campbell of his ambition to be the first man to exceed five miles a minute on land. Daytona Beach is only 12 miles long as a result, Campbell has had to cut out early in order to stop before he reaches the end of the course. Under-estimation of his speed would mean that car and reach its maximum in a shorter driver would dash into the sea at distance. the finish.

The new wind brakes will be a life body, to improve streamlining. It is morrow night's fixture: sociation having been compelled to or death experiment.
