PRESERVING OF HALIBUT

Dr. Bedford Has Audience of 200 Fishermen at Opening Of Lecture Series

Latest Methods

Necessity of Keeping Fish in Good Shape on Boats Stressed

Stressing the necessity of employing the latest and most effective means of preserving halibut from the time it is caught on the fishing grounds through the various steps of delivery to port, handling for shipment, transportation and marketing until it reaches the consumer, Dr. Robert H. Bedford of the scientific staff of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station last night at the hall of the Deep Sea Fishermen's Union, before a gathering of some two hundred fishermen with G. W. Nickerson, secretary of the Canadian Halibut Vessel Owners' Association, presiding, opened a series of two lectures on "The Preservation of Fresh Halibut at Sea." Dr. Bedford urged upon his listeners the desirability of the process of preservation commencing as soon as the fish are caught and appealed for a feeling of co-operation among all interested so that a united front might be presented in attacking this phase of the problems of the fishing industry. After many suggestions had been made by the speaker in regard to improved methods of fish preservation, the meeting was thrown open for general discussion in which a number of those present participated. The lecture proved of great interest and value to all.

Another page was written into history when Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the United States, signed the gold bill (also known as the dollar devaluation bill) on his 52nd birthday. A day later, Roosevelt announced that the United States' dollar had been devaluated to 59.06 cents. All of which is very nice, so far, for Canada, inasmuch as Canadian gold stocks have soared to high levels, holding their gain through profit-taking. The United States made a "profit" of $2,770,000,000 on the "new deal" while Canada and other nations wonder what to do next.
