CRACK UP IN WALES

Escape When Plane Demolished Enroute From Rome

NEWPORT. Pembrokeshire, Wales, Aug. 20:-George Pond and Cesare Sabelli, who recently flew across the Atlantic Ocean from New York to Ireland, where they crashed, going on to Rome after repairs had been made to their plane, hopped off from Rome at 7:02 Saturday morning for Dublin, Irish Free State, whence they had intended to make the return crossing of the ocean to the United States, but they ran into a heavy fog on the Irish Sea and turned back inland, crashing near here and demolishing their plane which buried its nose in the earth. Both fliers had a miraculous escape from injury or death. Both aviators were badly shaken up but suffered no serious injuries.

It is not known as yet whether a new plane will be provided for Pond and Sabelli to make the return flight.
