DICTATORSHIPS BREED PLOTS

The trouble in Russia in which one of the leading statesmen of the country lost his life reminds us that dictatorships always tend to breed plots. They tend to encourage people to show their opposition in underhand criminal manner. There is no other way of getting control of the policy of the country except by killing those in control.

In a democracy no such drastic action is necessary. All that a person or group of persons has to do in order to bring about a change of policy is to persuade the people of the country that it is right and in their best interests and they will vote for it. Everyone has an opportunity to demonstrate his political talents if he wishes. There is no need for drastic action and such action is always futile.

Under a democracy we may not always get the best results in government but we train people in self-restraint and teach them to take a lively interest in governmental affairs. When we watch the manner in which the various systems work out in Europe, it makes us better than ever satisfied with our own system. It is cumbersome and anything but economical but it can be modified and improved. Until several other countries demonstrate that they have something better and show its workings over a period of years, we shall scarcely wish to imitate it.

SHOULD BE STANDARDIZED

A friend of this paper makes a suggestion which we pass on for what it is worth. He says that in visiting around among his friends at Christmas he found that the cocktails he drank were much too varied. Some of them were made with a base of rum, some with gin, some with whiskey and many mixed them with various fruit juices which he found neither pleasant to the taste or beneficial to the health. He suggests that a general formula be followed so that visitors may not be taking chances as they do now.

Possibly under these difficult circumstances it may be wise to appoint Mr. Millar chief cocktail supervisor in order that such connoisseurs as our friend may be protected. The alternative would be to form a new organization to be known as the Uniform Cocktail Society that would undertake to bring about reforms in this direction.

We strongly suspect our friend of having extreme radical tendencies in introducing such a leftist movement into city politics.

WAS GREAT EXPLORER

Capt. J. E. Bernier, Now Dead, Did Much Work For Canada In North

LEVIS, Que., Dec. 28. (CP)—Captain Joseph Elzeur Bernier, celebrated French-Canadian Arctic explorer, who died here on Wednesday night, would have been eighty-three years of age on New Year's day.

Capt. Bernier for years conducted Arctic exploratory work for the Canadian government, reaching many remote points seldom if ever visited by white men. One of the ambitions of his life was to visit the North Pole but he never achieved this desire.

Much of the work of claiming Arctic regions for Canada fell to Captain Bernier. The Captain, in his capacity as explorer for the department of interior, Ottawa, made 12 trips to the Arctic Islands, during which he planted the Canadian flag on many of them. The Captain, in the course of 60 years as a seafaring man, covered nearly 500,000 miles in his trips and during this time was master of 107 ships. In between his trips to the Arctic Captain Bernier did much to familiarize people of Canada with its frozen north by lecture tours. The Captain in most of the journeys north used the Canadian government steamship Arctic. In 1924 the first experiments with short wave radio equipment were made on Captain Bernier's ship.

Captain Bernier was particularly proud of the fact that on one of his northern cruises a cross was planted under his supervision on a mountain top on Melville Island. This is the farthest north spot in the world where there exists such a monument. It is a landmark for a great distance, and it is solidly planted, for the base rests in an accumulation of stones six feet deep. Every one of these stones had to be carried up the mountain side in a sack, one at a time. The arduous labor occupied the crew of the exploring vessel many days, but they were a proud and happy lot when the cross was finally raised with imposing ceremonies and consecrated by a French-Canadian missionary to the Eskimos.

The navigator was born at Levis, Que., on January 1, 1852, and was the son of a sea captain, Thomas Bernier. He got his first command of a vessel at the age of 17 and made many trips in charge of a schooner when still a youth. He established a record for the round trip in a sailing ship from Canada to England which stood for many years. Temporarily retiring from the sea Captain Bernier accepted the governorship of Quebec jail for four years, but could not resist the lure of the ocean and resigned this position.

He was a member of the Royal Colonial Canadian Institute, London, and the Quebec Geographical Society. He was twice married, both of his wives predeceasing him, as did his only son. When on shore the Captain resided in Levis, across the river from Quebec, where he was dock master for some years.

Are Released From Jail at Yuletide

Axel Osand and Harold Simonsen Given Their Freedom on Christmas Eve

Axel Osand and Harold Simonsen of this city, recently sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment each for violation of the Game Act in connection with the shooting of deer on the Queen Charlotte Islands, were released from city jail, where they were serving the time, on Christmas Eve, several days having been lopped off their time on compassionate grounds by the provincial government by order-in-council. The two men under normal circumstances would have been released on January 2.

Leave your COLD in a Mustard Bath

Don't let coughs and colds get worse! Stop them quickly by taking a hot mustard bath—steaming hot water and 3 tablespoonsful of Colman's Mustard! Lie there and relax. Your skin will tingle. Then jump out, dry yourself thoroughly, get straight into bed and sweat the poisons out! Wonderful stuff—Colman's Mustard, the good old-fashioned remedy.

Or, if more convenient, take a foot bath in a pail of water as hot as you can bear, with a tablespoonful of Colman's Mustard. Wipe yourself up warm and soak your feet for 15 minutes—and keep warm afterwards! Mustard plasters on the chest or aching parts give quick relief. You can't beat these old-time "prescriptions."
