Will Investigation Reveal Scenes Like These in Canadian Penitentiaries?

An Inmate Is Operated On

No More "Lockstep."

And He's No Longer a Citizen.

In view of the probability of royal commission investigating Canadian penal institutions, the above pictures of Sing Sing, one of continent's most famous prisons, are interesting. The candid camera records some of events in a day's life of the inmates and officials of the "Big House" on the banks of the Hudson at Ossining, N.Y., in which more than two thousand of New York's law breakers are serving terms of from one year to life. Despite drama and tragedy, Sing Sing is a comparative happy institution. Inmates work in the shops, enjoy radio music in their cells, are well fed, play handball and baseball and in general, enjoy life as much as possible behind prison walls. Rehabilitation rather than punishment is the objective.
