Man in the Moon

Good afternoon. Have you cast your sacred ballot yet?

Jake says he has only voted twice so far but he is hoping to get in again before closing hours.

Election returns should dispel some of the visions of local politicians. If they were all right, we should have a funny condition with three men elected.

Possibly you may have heard the story about the parson who wrote the bishop of his diocese asking him to come and hold a "Quiet Day." The bishop wrote back that what was needed in that parish was not a quiet day but an earthquake.

In Ethiopia it is said the soldiers are beginning to knit comforts for the harassed civilian population.

There's a story told about a music stool that a man bought and took home. A few days later he returned it saying he had twisted and turned it in every direction but could not get a single note out of it. This is not an election story.

At Booth School the other day Bobbie was asked where the elephant was found. He scratched his head and furrowed his little brow and then suddenly beamed. "Please Miss, the elephant is so big & is seldom lost."

The Letter Box

MAKES CORRECTION

Editor, Daily News:—
Will you please allow me to correct a gross mis-statement of facts as published in your rival paper of October 12 in which it is stated that Hanson's promise of a smoke house and freezing plant at Skidegate has not been taken seriously.

Mr. Hanson never made such a promise, and in all our travels together, I never heard Mr. Hanson make any promises in order to get votes. I will now state the facts. About four months ago a petition was signed by a large number of the fishermen asking Mr. Hanson to lay before the government the need of their help the same as the fishermen on the Atlantic Coast were getting, namely, a small ice-making plant with cold storage facilities so that they could have ice and bait in order that they could make a living. Mr. Hanson's answer to that was that, whether he was elected or not, it was a legitimate request and he certainly would place it before the government. Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
B. J. BACON.
