VALUE OF DEMOCRACY

In these days when democratic governments often seem to have failed and when they are acknowledged to be inefficient, it is interesting to note that they are defended by many who have lived under other kinds of governments. W. H. Chamberlin, a journalist, who lived in Russia for almost twelve years, looking back at conditions as he found them throughout that time after being away a year, writes in the magazine section of the Christian Science Monitor, as follows:

"My own feeling is that democracy and civilization are almost synonymous terms. Even if the method of dictatorship should produce a higher material standard of living (and Russia's experience up to the present time would emphatically suggest that this is not likely to be the case), I cannot conceive that it would be desirable to live in a society where every printed and spoken word was controlled, where one feared to talk freely even to close friends for fear that they might be government spies; where social contact with a foreigner was positively physically dangerous, where some prying snooper was likely to read any incoming or outgoing letter and where one was never secure against arbitrary arrest and exile."

Mr. Chamberlin told of the famine of 1932-1933 which was brought on "to teach the peasant a lesson" in which something like four million lives were lost. He says: "Under democratic systems peoples have done many foolish things and some cruel ones, but nothing, I say with full confidence, remotely as bad as this state-organized famine."

"Say everything that can fairly be said about the constructive aspects of the Soviet regime. Recognize the industrial expansion of the country, the improved educational and recreational facilities for the masses, the absence of race discrimination, the sincere belief of many Communists that they are working for Russia's ultimate good. But to me personally the blast furnaces cannot roar loudly enough, the turbines cannot turn out electrical power fast enough to drown out the cries of the innumerable victims of this merciless sacrifice of large sections of the population on the altar of industrialization. The 4,000,000 lives deliberately lost in the famine, to me, outweigh the 10,000,000 tons of pig iron which Russia produced, for the first time in its history, in 1934."

"The description I have written would apply to life in the Soviet Union as I have known it. It also applies, in greater or less degree, to every country that has thrown over democracy for dictatorship. My own feeling, in looking back at Russia, is that, if we want to prevent western civilization from breaking down, either in the Bolshevik way or in some other, possibly milder, but still unpleasant way, there is a very strong obligation to do two things: to work for peace and to work for social justice. Russia, on the basis of its present-day record, is not a challenge to any western country. But it is a very strong warning of what might happen to any country under an irresistible double stress of war and of acute poverty and insecurity among large masses of the people."

Montreal Maroons Take Stanley Cup

Montreal Leaves No Doubt Of Superiority in Winning Over Maple Leafs by 4 to 1 Score

MONTREAL, April 10: (CP)—Making it three straight wins, Montreal Maroons put on a fighting, brainy display of hockey and defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs last night by a score of 4 to 1 to capture the Stanley Cup, professional hockey's highest prize, and ring down the curtain on major league hockey for the season. Once again the Montrealers never allowed the issue to get in doubt. For them it was a field night and they were decidedly the best team. Only in the second period did the Maple Leafs present any serious threat but they found the Maroon defence sound and were able to get only one goal to the Maroons' two for all their spinning.

In the first period, only one goal was made, Jimmy Ward scoring for Montreal. In the second Wentworth and Northcott scored for Montreal and Thoms the only Toronto goal. The teams entered the third period with the score standing 3 to 1 and the Maple Leafs endeavoring to concentrate on attack. About half way through the final period, Wentworth took the puck away and passed it to Marker who scored the fourth for Montreal.

The Maroons took the series by winning the first game at Toronto 3 to 2 in overtime, the second in Toronto 3 to 1 and the third last night by the 4 to 1 count.
