Senator Huey P. Long Passes Away Early This Morning After Shooting

Hectic Career

Adrenalin and Oxygen Kept Him Alive During Last Night

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana, September 10 (Canadian Press)—All hope for the recovery of Senator Huey Pierce Long, dictator of the State of Louisiana, who was shot down in a corridor of State House Sunday night by Dr. C. A. Weiss jr., thirty-year old surgeon and son of a political opponent whom Long was about to gerrymander out of the state legislature, was abandoned last night and at 4:10 this morning he succumbed. Failing to respond to treatment, Long started to sink rapidly yesterday to the effects of a bullet wound in the abdomen. Adrenalin was administered last night to keep him alive after a fourth blood transfusion had been given under an oxygen tent. About midnight Long was struggling in his delirium to get from under the tent, apparently laboring under the delusion that an attempt was being made to take his picture. It was his death struggle. Nurses were ordered out of the room while doctors attempted to quieten him.

There were numerous conflicting reports yesterday as to Long's condition. One report would say that he was dying and another that he was doing favorably. Physicians battled thirty-one hours to save Long's life. One operation was performed, five blood transfusions administered and oxygen was given.

Many of his admirers are grief-stricken at his death. Some of his political opponents openly expressed satisfaction that he is dead.

The aged mother of his assailant told reporters that she hoped he would live.

During the day Long's wife and three children arrived here from their home at New Orleans and they were at hand at the end.

Following a hasty inquest, Dr. Weiss, who was shot down by Long's bodyguard after he had fired at the Senator, was given a simple burial with thousands striving to attend.

Had Ups and Downs

Was Involved With Albert B. Fall In Scandal During Regime of President Harding

In Mexico, he reared an industrial empire of such vast proportions that his investments were known as greatest concentrated holdings of private capital in the world. From "Mexican Pete" radiated concerns controlling refineries, pipe lines, storage plants, railroads, tank steamers, and distributing stations, far flung along the seaboard—in Mexico, Panama, Brazil, and the United States.

With Rockefeller, Sinclair and others, Doheny was one of America's storied oil barons. The calm nerve that carried him to success through the hard living days of the oil frontier of a generation ago, stood him in good stead when he reached the age at which many men retire.

Involved in Scandal

He was well past 60 when the oil scandals of President Harding's administration centered around the group of which he was a member and his name was carried to a sweeping position of attention before the American people. He was indicted in 1924.

Tragedy and sorrow stalked him. In the heat of the oil litigation, his only son, E. L. Doheny, jr., was murdered by a servant. He saw his old friend, Albert B. Fall, Harding's secretary of the interior, declared guilty of bribe taking.

In the ramifications of litigation, that followed leasing of government oil lands by Fall, an alleged $100,000 bribe given Fall by Doheny occupied a key position. It was for that act that Fall was convicted. Bu Doheny was acquitted.

The government charged that Secretary Fall leased to Doheny the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in California. (Continued on Page Four)
