AN EPIC OF THE SEAS

"Man of Aran," the picture showing today for the last time at the Capitol, is an outstanding oasis in a desert of movie monotony. Hollywood is wholly eliminated in its filming. It is an artistic epic of the sea picturing life as it is really lived by the hardy folk who inhabit a small group of rocky islets in the Atlantic Ocean west of Ireland.

There is no other picture just like this one. If only for its originality of treatment it should be seen by all movie fans. Those who do not care much for the movies and who become satiated with sex as seen on the silver screen, will welcome this as a real piece of art, simple as all art must be, but gripping and exciting, something to be remembered. Any person seeing this film will find it difficult to get from the mind the picture of the lonely isle, the barren rocks, the fine features of the men and women, the homely simplicity and the terrible life they lead, fighting daily against ruthless forces of nature.

To some people the feature of this film will be the splendid pictures of the basking shark, a skeleton of which was recently picked up near Prince Rupert. The Aran residents are seen hunting this huge creature and excellent close-up scenes are given by which it is possible to visualize what the local skeleton is like when clothed with flesh. There may be plenty of pictures one can afford to miss, but "Man of Aran" is in a different class and should be seen.

U. S. LUMBER DUTY

Minneapolis interests are asking Congress to remove or reduce the duty on Canadian pine and spruce lumber even though no reciprocal arrangement is made with this country. It is pointed out in their brief that United States cannot supply the demand and that there is neither a demand nor a justification for the duty. Also it is shown that many American firms are interested in supplying this timber because of the scarcity in their own country.

It is also argued that it is a good thing to have this lumber enter the United States in order to preserve the balance of trade and thus make a market for American goods in Canada. The contention seems to be a reasonable one and it is hoped that Premier Bennett will see fit to include lumber in his negotiations for a reciprocal trade pact.

British Fighter Wins in U.S.

In the first fight in the United States, Don McCorkindale, British heavyweight, who hails from South Africa, is showing that he can "take it". In the first round Patsy Perroni (right), of Cleveland, is smashing a hard left to Don's face, while his right is being aimed at the same target. Patsy took the round, but the game Britisher rallied and took a close decision in this bout. McCorkindale is the lad who knocked Canadian Larry Gains out of contention.

BALAGNO WON OUT

Eliminated Earl Batt From City Billiard Championship Last Night

In their second and concluding block of 500 points, C. P. Balagno won handily from Earl Batt last evening at the Canadian Legion clubrooms in the city billiard championship to take the first round match by 1000 points to 817.

Neither player found the going easy and the best breaks were only a 74 by Balagno and two 22's by Batt. All the way through the scoring was slow and the game not nearly as interesting as the first block.

Batt has every reason, however, to feel pleased with his first attempt in the city championship. He still plays the balls too hard at times and shows lack of experience in the shots he chooses. But he has ability and, with practice, will certainly go farther. Balagno, though not up to his usual form, kept plugging along and certainly left his younger opponent many a problem to solve.

The next match on Wednesday and Thursday between A. Donald and Neil Cameron should be a better game. Donald is always liable to make a big break while Cameron, if he plays up to his form, will show the spectators clever constructive billiards. As he has already made a 100 break, even if only in a friendly game, Tinker's best break, so far, of 45 may be left far behind.

MUSIC WAS DELIGHTFUL

Reading of Opera "Peer Gynt" With Interpolations and Miscellaneous Program Enjoyed

Reading by Mrs. H. B. Rochester of the story of the colorful Ibsen-Gregg opera "Peer Gynt" with vocal and instrumental interpolations by members of the club together with a supplementary musical program constituted a delightful entertainment at a largely attended guest meeting of the Ladies' Music Club at St. Andrew's Anglican Cathedral Hall last evening.

A very attractive setting in the form of a bower of flowers and evergreens had been arranged especially for the presentation of "Peer Gynt" and the ladies taking part wore colorful Norwegian folk costumes which lent further to the unique effectiveness.

The "Peer Gynt" interpolations were as follows:

- Piano duet, "Morning Mood," Mrs. E. J. Smith and Miss Margaret McCaffery.
- Piano solo, "Ingrid's Lament," Mrs. W. L. Stamford
- Piano duet, "In the Hall of the Mountain King," Mrs. E. J. Smith and Miss Margaret McCaffery.
- Vocal solo, "Solveig's Song," Mrs. J. H. McLeod.
- Violin solo, "The Death of Ase," Miss Nellie Lawrence.
- Piano duet, "Arabian Dance," Mrs. W. L. Stamford and Mrs. W. E. Drake.
- Piano duet, "Anitra's Dance," Miss Margaret McCaffery and Miss Ruth Gillies.
- Piano duet, "Peer Gynt's Return Home," Mrs. W. L. Stamford and Mrs. W. E. Drake.
- Mrs. W. L. Stamford played the piano accompaniments.

- Mrs. R. L. McIntosh, president of the club, made opening remarks and turned the proceedings over to Mrs. J. A. Hinton who was in charge for the evening.
- Responsible for the effective decorations were Mrs. C. E. Cullin, Mrs. Ernest Anderson, Leonard Cripps, N. L. Jones and Boy Scouts.

LONG IN POLITICS

John Whitnah Leedy, Former Governor of Kansas, Was Prominent in Alberta Affairs

Was Radical

Reformed Banking Laws of His State Before Coming North And Tried Same in Canada

EDMONTON, March 26: (CP)—John Whitnah Leedy, aged 86, governor of Kansas from 1897 to 1899, died here Sunday. A native of Ohio, he went to Valdez, Alaska, in 1901, served as city attorney, mayor and referee in bankruptcy for that district until 1908, came here in 1910 and was a member of the United Farmers of Alberta in its early organization.

An ultra Liberal in politics in his early days with a tendency toward radicalism in his later years, Leedy never forsook politics, no matter where his home. Prominent in the ranks of the Republican party, then the Democratic party and later the Populist organization in his home state, he linked with the small farm groups in Alberta shortly after his arrival in the foothills province. His strong views, expressed in colored oratory, carried him away from the farmers' organization and into seclusion after the general election in Alberta in 1926.

Leedy established his first Alberta home at Whitecourt late in 1916 and finally located in Edmonton with relatives when he failed to win the Alberta Legislature seat. A staunch member of the local farm organizations in 1911, 1912 and 1913, Leedy became prominent in the Non-Partisan League. He never achieved election to either the House of Commons or the Alberta Legislature although he was nominated for both houses in Alberta constituencies.

His affiliation with the farm units brought Leedy in close contact with Henry Wise Wood, for 17 years president of the United Farmers of Alberta and father of the Alberta Wheat Pool.

He and Wood split on party affairs and a short time before the election of 1921 when the party assumed power in Alberta, was held. Leedy resigned from the U. F. A. At the age of 52, Leedy answered the call of friends from Kansas in 1931 where banking difficulties were mounting rapidly and banks were closing. He was resident in Edmonton at the time. The call came quickly from the state where Leedy was a former governor. And just as quickly he answered the call, stepping into an aeroplane for the first time and flying to Kansas City via Calgary and Lethbridge. The trip was completed and his advice to bankers given.

Humble Start
Leedy was forced to depend on his own resources early in life as result of his father's death. His education was a few months in rural schools.

He clerked in a drug store for three years and for 12 years afterward, 1868 to 1880, worked on an Illinois farm. Later he farmed in Kansas where he entered politics. He was the second and last Populist governor of the state, serving from 1897 to 1899 after being a state senator from 1893 until 1897. Leedy was defeated for re-election in the gubernatorial vote of 1906.

His Canadian campaigns based on attacking the Canadian banking system and he urged adoption of a system based on that which was established by his administration in Kansas. This, he contended, would give the small Alberta farmer a better deal than which he believed the farmer was receiving.

Leedy married Sarah J. Boyd of Fredricktown, O., November 4, 1875. They had three children.
