Slow Start in Fishing This Year Makes Waterfront Unusually Quiet-Weather is Having Adverse Effect-No Fresh Halibut Yet

It is many years since various lines of fishing out of Prince Rupert have been so slow in getting started as this spring. With the halibut fleet decided not to start the season's operations until April 1, and some uncertainty existing as to the extent of their activity even at that time, a spell of strong northwesterly winds during the past week has prevented salmon trolling acti-x vities around Port Simpson while TIC an unseasonable cold snap has blue slowed up the herring fishing. The Prince Rupert waterfront is experencing one of the quiestest springs t has had in many a day.

In spite of the decision of the regular fleet not to start out with the opening of legal fishing on March 1, it had been expected that a few small boats would have been in within a few days of the opening weather off Port Simpson has pre-

There has been a noticeable scar-Rupert harbor.

The cold and windy weather caused the herring to scatter this week but Capt. R. Gammon is still fishing for the fourth straight week right in Prince Rupert harbor. Capt. Gammon is still taking the fish for the Nelson Bros. Ltd. reduction plant. Having filled the bait requirements of the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. for the season, Capt. Ole Skog has ceased seining with the Fredelia for that company.

A new water main is now in process of being laid along the waterfront to the rear of the Government Wharf alongside the railway Ivy Guild, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Wesrack and roadway.
